Top 10 Ways Newspapers Mistreat Carriers

Detailing the down side of a grueling daily chore that's much needed but little appreciated

I RECENTLY HAD to get up early to catch a plane to Detroit (two things I hate, waking early and going to Detroit). Leaving for the airport, I came across Miami Herald and Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel carriers delivering their routes in my complex. Watching them brought back memories of exhaustion. I have delivered hundreds of thousands of papers. I could relate.

It's been a long time since I've awakened at 1, 2 or 3 in the morning to toss papers along a route or to check on carriers. I'm endlessly amazed at what they accomplish every day, how little recognition they receive for their efforts, and how badly most papers treat them. Buoyed by recent congressional legislation that reduces from 20 to three the number of points defining an independent contractor, as opposed to an employee, newspaper companies have virtual carte blanche to do as they will to carriers.

Because the complex I live in doesn't allow dogs and cats, the only pets I have are peeves. In no particular order, here are my top 10 on how newspapers mistreat carriers:

10. No pay for waiting time when papers are late. When someone nicknamed Scoop yells, "Stop the presses," he may have visions of Pulitzer Prizes, but carriers have visions of being fired from their real jobs for being late. I worked at a morning paper where delays resulted in the last paper coming out after 3 a.m. for weeks. Though many carriers had jobs to go to, they were bullied or cajoled into waiting around for papers for hours. But the press lateness didn't stop some circulation personnel from having the nerve to slap carriers who did stay with complaint charges for late delivery!

If carriers are forced to wait an unreasonable amount of time for papers, they should be compensated. Cab drivers get waiting time. Why not carriers?

9. Supply charges. Grocery clerks ask, "Paper or plastic?" With many newspapers, "paper in plastic" is mandatory. But at about a penny a piece, plastic bags take a big bite out of carriers' earnings.

Relaxed federal regulations on independent contractors now allow papers to provide carriers with supplies gratis without being hauled into court.

8. Commissions. Newspapers pay outside companies as much as $50 per subscription order — too often for "Teflon" circulation. Why not reapportion some of this sales expense and up the ante for carriers who sell subscriptions — especially since their orders are more likely to stick?

7. Not sharing insert revenues. Preprinted ad inserts bring in revenue — and require additional work for carriers, who have to assemble papers for delivery and toss heavier loads. Why not allocate a percentage of the revenue to them? It's nice to share.

6. Forcing carriers to service deadbeat subscribers. Carriers often complain, "The paper won't let me stop my nonpays." This isn't a problem with 100% office-collect payment systems. On the other hand, many newspapers avoid 100% office-collect to avoid losing nonpays from the rolls of paid subscribers.

I've seen circulation personnel stuff nonpay stop forms in their desks — the bigger the desk, the more "successful" the manager. Of course, they defend the practice as part of an aggressive program to reduce stops, never distinguishing between saving stops and saving garbage. And speaking of garbage, newspapers recycle their own — every time a nonpay stop is reborn again as a new start. Sisyphus never had it so bad.

5. Carrier billing statements for quantum physicists. Someone with masochistic tendencies, and way too much free time, came up with a billing system based on future estimates and past adjustments. Rather than bill carriers for current papers, and credit them for current office-collect subscribers, someone with an abacus and a crystal ball peers into the future, "sees" future numbers and creates estimated bills. In the next billing cycle, adjustments are posted to correct imperfect projections, and new predictions are posted.

If you're lost, don't despair. People working with this system often scratch their heads. Pity the pre-calculus youngsters who deliver routes for these papers — not to mention the adults.

4. No minimum hourly wage. Unlike workers toiling for minimum wage, carriers have no such guarantee because they are independent contractors, entrepreneurs. Consequently, some carriers end up making little more per hour than laborers sewing together Nike sneakers in Asia.

Even if they are independent contractors, carriers still ought to be guaranteed a minimum return for their time. I have seen papers where routes generated as little as $1 an hour. Considering that carriers work seven days and get no shift differential for the lousy hours, they deserve a minimum guarantee of $8 to $12 an hour.

Tough Task: Just The Good News, Ma'am

MAYBE ALL NEWS is good news. On Tuesday, July 21, the Mesa, Ariz., Tribune turned the famous dictum on its head, filling its pages with nothing but uplifting articles.

Changing its nameplate to Good News Tribune, the daily's Mesa and Scottsdale editions trumpeted the good taste of the area's tap water and regaled readers with regional gains in recycling.

"School's out, the Legislature is quiet and no-one is hiding under all the normal rocks we turn over for stories," executive editor Alan Geere wrote in a note to readers. "Crime tends to surface in quiet times. Horrible people do horrible things to other horrible people and their crimes and misdemeanors turn up in the newspaper. I decided that we'd all had enough murder and mayhem."

"Look," the editor elaborated in an interview. "I could probably get a rabbit to write a court story after a while. To get people looking in different places for stories was difficult."

The Good News Tribune led with a state story — and, luckily, it accentuated the positive: The state Supreme Court approved a school construction financing plan that effectively ended a fight over funding disparities between rich and poor districts.

Business, sports, features, even wire service stories had an upbeat spin. For instance, the headline on a wire item about a cruise ship that burst into flames in the waters off Miami Beach: "All aboard survive cruise ship fire."

Good News
Tribune
Today's 'Good News' Tribune
Schools escape funding crisis
State high court rules system constitutional
Lucky puppy gets second chance
Valley's tap water tastiest in years
Teen graduates 2nd in class after kicking troubled past

Bad news is no news; be good or be gone.

Geere admitted the concept was met with some skepticism in the newsroom. "I think the idea is a bit condescending and stinks of sarcasm," he quoted one reporter as saying. "Essentially what we're saying with this is: 'Here's your good news. Now, get off our backs.'"

Initial results suggest the high road leads to a bountiful harvest.

- Hundreds of readers called and e-mailed to demand the paper make a habit of inspirational reporting.
- It has drawn huge media exposure. Geere said newspaper staffers have been interviewed by media outlets from Seattle, Chicago, San Antonio and Decatur, Ill.
- Circulation seemed to get a bump, too, according to anecdotal evidence from distributors, Geere said.

He says managers at the 88,000-circulation daily will meet soon to determine if the good times will continue to roll.

Pass on Portland, Guild advises Tony, Dean, Bob

THESE ARE THE CEOs who try union workers' souls: William Dean Singleton, Tony Ridder and Robert Jelenic.

A report sponsored by the Maine Newspaper Guild cites Singleton's MediaNews Group, Ridder's Knight Ridder, and Jelenic's Journal Register Co. as "worst case" scenarios for the three Maine dailies being sold by Guy Gannett Communications of Portland. MediaNews and Journal Register are considered likely to bid for the group, led by the Portland Press Herald.

The report, released by a group of state politicians supporting Press Herald employees who want to buy into the papers, attacks the three companies for slashing staff and pay and figures Maine would suffer if a cost-cutter bought the Guy Gannett papers. Lopping 100 jobs would cost the state $6.4 million in lost income and $7.5 million in lost sales, the report says.

"We really aren't running for Guild office," Singleton said from his Denver office. "I don't sit around my desk worrying about whether unions like me or not." Suggesting the Guild's opprobrium may be misplaced, Singleton added, "We, at this point, aren't even involved in Guy Gannett."

Knight Ridder declined to comment on the study, which criticized its cuts after buying the Monterey County (Calif.) Herald last year. A spokesperson for Jelenic, whose Trenton, N.J.-based firm was taken to task for its 1993 takeover of the Norristown, Pa., Times Herald, responded, "We believe we have very good relations with our employees and we serve our communities very well."

Final bids are expected in August.

Editor jailed for snooping on judge

A FORMER HONG Kong newspaper editor drew a four-month jail sentence for ordering paparazzi-style surveillance of a senior judge and printing "abusive and scurrilous" attacks on the judiciary.

Wong Yeung-ng, former chief editor of the Chinese-language Oriental Daily News, was found in contempt of court.

In a series, the Daily News, one of Hong Kong's largest and raciest papers, called members of a tribunal policing pornography "mangy yellow-skinned dogs" and warned it would "wipe them all out." High Court Judge Patrick Chan also fined the paper's parent company more than $641,000, but said it was not responsible for the reporters who trailed a senior judge after he ruled against the Daily News in a battle with a rival newspaper.

McCurry's Spinning Set Poor Standard

GIVEN THEIR INCLINATION to protect their images at all costs, U.S. presidents are hardly the best judges of what makes a good press secretary. Still, President Clinton's declaration that the departing Mike McCurry "has set the standard by which future White House press secretaries will be judged" sets a standard for absurdity that is high even for this administration of fabulists.

Here was a press secretary who told the Chicago Tribune's Roger Simon that his job in the Monica Lewinsky matter was "telling the truth slowly." And, in fact, McCurry let everyone know that he was going out of his way to avoid learning anything about the relationship between the president and his intern. Now, with the subpoena-happy Kenneth Starr lurking about, many White House workers took the same tack. But press secretaries who feel they cannot get the truth out to journalists and the American public at large should get out themselves. Instead, McCurry hung around and helped the Clinton administration's stonewalling.

The worst part is that journalists by and large let McCurry get away with it. When McCurry announced his resignation, White House reporters filled the airwaves and their columns not with reminders that he had failed in his fundamental duty to inform, but with encomia about his charm and wit. And you don't have to be Dorothy Parker to qualify as a wit with this apparently easily amused press corps. "Hey, look, everybody! Mike's wearing a paper bag on his head and calling himself an 'anonymous source!' What a riot!"

Perhaps the most telling praise of McCurry's tenure was this: "Mike McCurry has handled a demanding and difficult job extremely well. He has brought credit and credibility to the position." Ron Ziegler, press secretary to President Nixon, said that — from one old pro to another.

Thanks for the memories of joy and a free press

FORD RISLEY'S COLUMN about the Georgia Gazette ("Shop Talk," July 11, p. 48) found its way to me here in London just as I was putting the last touches on a review of a new book calling for a constitutional revolution in Britain.

The author, Jonathan Freedland, believes the time has come for the Queen's subjects to enjoy the same liberties that United States citizens have held for 221 years, particularly freedom of expression.

The British government has the Official Secrets Act to threaten whistleblowers, blasphemy laws to stifle criticism of the official church, and secrecy to conduct domestic and foreign policy out of the public glare. You can't monitor the behavior of the police or the courts because you can't say a word about a case until a verdict is in. Prior restraint and bad libel law have made timidity the prevailing character trait in much of the British press.

What this country needs is a few editors willing to go to jail, or at least bankrupt! It's enough to make me want to revive the Gazette.

We didn't have much money at the Gazette, and we probably wasted too much of what we did have, but we had a tremendous amount of freedom, and we put every bit of it to work. It took only a few issues before our two columns of editorials became the starting point of every important public debate in Savannah.

Your column reminded me how odd a notion that was, even 20 years ago before marketing departments and public relations agencies had developed so much influence over our newspapers.

Shortly after the Pulitzers were announced in 1984, the publisher of a small Georgia daily stopped me at a press association meeting to congratulate me, but he confessed to being a little bemused. "We used to publish editorials," he said, "but we don't anymore. There just wasn't any money in it."

Risley is right that the Gazette has become a journalistic footnote, but for seven years we managed to change the way life worked in a town of 150,000. Scattered around America's community press are dozens of editor/ owners with the same commitment to their readers. As your July 11 issue went to press, many of them were meeting in Erie, Pa., at the annual conference of the International Society of Weekly Newspaper Editors to critique each other's editorial pages. And Bernie Stein's recognition this year with a Pulitzer at the Riverdale (N.Y.) Press suggests once again that neither size nor frequency much matter when it comes to passionate exercise of editorial freedom, unless maybe they are inversely related, the smaller the paper the stronger the voice.

I have to make do now with a weekly critique of the London dailies on British television. Thank you for reviving the memories of the joy and freedom that come from exercising constitutional liberties.

Albert Scardino
former editor, Georgia Gazette

Newspaperdom®

50 YEARS AGO . . . The editor and publisher of the 265,393-circulation Washington Times-Herald bequeathed the newspaper — worth millions of dollars, including the land and building — to seven employees to either incorporate, purchase from one another or sell at their discretion.

Eleanor Patterson made the employees in the following positions trustees for the next three years: general manager, editor in chief, advertising director, supervising managing editor, circulation director, mechanical superintendent and night managing editor.

One columnist received three business properties, among personal items such as black pearl earrings. The horse racing writer was granted all of the publisher's dogs and horses.

Spirited attack on religion column

AS A CHRISTIAN, I struggle to find a reason for Michael Riley's column ("N.J.'s Divine Columnist: The Rev. Michael Riley, May 30, pp. 16, 17). Though Riley's editors paint him as a not-too-preachy man who loves the Lord, I have to disagree. Si Liberman suggests, "In preaching Christian principles, the beleaguered columnist says, he tries not to do it in a staid way."

The reality is, he doesn't do it in any way. What Riley writes about is a watered-down brand of Christianity mixed with moral relativism. Riley is not preaching the gospel. The Word of God can be preached in as earthy a language as the listener desires while keeping integrity of the message. Unfortunately, Riley does not succeed in doing so. As a writer, I can appreciate Riley's wit and one-liners, though usually profane. But his columns often lack a point. I stopped reading Riley's column for all the above reasons, and I wonder why more haven't dropped him as well.

The reaction by the Asbury Park (N.J.) Press, subscribing to the "no press is bad press" adage, is not surprising but is disturbing. There are writers who can combine humor and Truth. Perhaps Gannett should broaden its horizons.

Driver Remains Enigma After Boss' Shotgun Murder

Wounded in shootout with police, gunman was fishing buddy of circulation manager he is accused of killing; Sault Ste. Marie Evening News silenced for four days

WITH CIRCULATION DIRECTOR Anthony Gillespie buried and his accused killer in custody and critically wounded, the Evening News in Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., finds itself as confused and traumatized as in those very first moments on the morning of July 23 when driver Nathan Paul Hanna strode into the newspaper, chatted with Gillespie — then aimed a shotgun at his fishing buddy and pulled the trigger.

"We really don't know anything," said News publisher Howard A. Kaiser. "There are a lot of things that we have absolutely no clue about."

No one yet knows what motivated the shooting by Hanna, who was captured July 26 after being shot in the chest, abdomen and leg in a gunfight with two Michigan state troopers and a member of the Chippewa County Sheriff's Department just a few miles from the News' downtown offices. Hanna, 39, underwent seven hours of surgery that day and remained in stable but critical condition under police guard at War Memorial Hospital in Sault Ste. Marie.

"He was not a disgruntled employee," Kaiser said. "He was not being disciplined by the newspaper. He had no problem with his work record."

Neither did Hanna have any apparent problem with Gillespie, a Philadelphia native who joined the newspaper about seven years ago after retiring from a 20-year career with the Air Force. In fact, Hanna and Gillespie had gone fishing together the weekend before the killing. "They had a very friendly relationship," Kaiser said.

At a press conference the day of the shooting, Det. Michael Whitney of the Sault Ste. Marie Police Department said subscribers on Hanna's route had noticed changes in the driver's behavior over the past week.

"Normally he waved or had a brief conversation with people on his route, but we've had some witnesses say that he'd started talking at length about World War III . . . the end of the world . . . real fire-and-brimstone stuff. He doesn't have any known church affiliation, but he'd apparently gotten heavy into reading the Scriptures and the Bible in the last while," Whitney said, according to a story by Dan Bellerose of the Sault Star, a Southam daily on the Ontario side of Sault Ste. Marie.

The shooting, coming at about 9:30 a.m., Thursday, July 23, shattered the 7,400-circulation daily.

The paper, which publishes Sunday through Friday, was shuttered the Thursday of the shooting and did not publish again until Tuesday, July 28.

"That first day, Thursday, the shooting happened about a half-hour before press time, and we had what we thought was a hostage situation until after 2:30 p.m.," Kaiser said. "On Friday we had the crime lab and environmental people here. And then, with the funeral on Monday morning, we were not going to publish during the funeral."

When the full-time staff of 40 returned to work, a uniformed police officer stood guard at the Arlington Street entrance — and security was very much on the mind of managers. Yet, here, too, the newspaper was left with plenty of questions and no answers.

"Security probably wouldn't have made any difference," Kaiser said. "Even with security, you had an independent contract driver who would be coming and going all the time. If you had a metal detector, here you have a contract driver who is carrying lots of coins. We just don't know."

When Hanna entered the building that morning, he made no attempt to conceal the pump-action 12-gauge Remington shotgun he had apparently purchased just two days before. Hunting is one of the attractions of the resort area located on the Michigan-Ontario border and shotguns are a common sight. A receptionist, who watched Hanna enter and climb a short stairway to the business office where Gillespie had a desk, heard the two talking quietly and told police she thought that Hanna was showing off the gun to his friend.

"There were no raised or angry voices in the conversation. Nothing was out of the ordinary. Hanna was an employee, and an apparent friend, and people in the vicinity were totally caught off-guard when the first shot was fired," Whitney said.

News editor Ken Fazzari told the Associated Press that he heard the first shot and turned to see Hanna pointing the shotgun at Gillespie. Fazzari led about a dozen colleagues into the photo darkroom and called 911 — just as another shot was fired.

Hanna expected to face more felony charges

How the Evening News played its own sad story

Fazzari told the Detroit Free Press that the first shot appeared to be fatal, but Hanna fired again. "I think the second shot was just for the heck of it," he said. Thinking Hanna was still inside and possibly holding hostages, police surrounded the building for about four hours before storming in.

Despite the long lead, Hanna apparently stayed in the immediate area — eluding searchers until the Sunday gun battle. Just before noon, a resident phoned police with a report of a man with a shotgun walking down a rural road just outside the Sault Ste. Marie city limits.

"Officers confronted the suspect walking on the road, repeatedly commanded him to lay down his weapon. He refused, turned and discharged at least one round from his weapon before officers responded," Jeff Moran of the Chippewa County Sheriff's Department told a press conference Sunday. Authorities said Hanna fired at police and missed before he was struck by three bullets.

Hanna is charged with murder and felony firearms charges. Other charges were expected to be added in connection with his confrontation with police.

Gillespie was buried July 28 after a funeral mass at St. Mary's Church in Sault Ste. Marie. He is survived by his wife Darla and three sons, Tony Jr., Nick and D.J., as well as two brothers and a sister. ■

Florida Reporters Cleared Of Harassment Charges

Instead of answering reporters' questions about a $50,000 gift from a felon, a Florida congresswoman filed a harassment complaint. The U.S. attorney's office has thrown it out.

TWO ST. PETERSBURG Times reporters have been cleared of charges that they harassed a congresswoman by asking her questions in the corridor of her Capitol office building about her alleged ethics violations.

In May, the two — Times Washington bureau chief David Dahl and staff reporter Bill Adair — asked Rep. Corrine Brown about the $50,000 Lexus LS 400 her daughter accepted as a gift from an associate of West African millionaire Foutanga Sissoko. The Jacksonville, Fla., Democrat ducked the questions — and then filed a complaint with the U.S. Capitol Police, accusing the journalists of conspiring to impede a member of Congress, a crime punishable by up to six years in prison. In addition, she requested and received police protection and contacted House officials about revoking the reporters' press credentials.

The House Ethics Committee is looking into allegations — contained in a series of stories by Adair and Dahl — that Brown accepted the Lexus for her daughter from Sissoko, a convicted felon and friend she tried to free from prison. According to GOP sources cited in the Capitol newspaper Roll Call, the committee is also investigating charges that Brown illegally accepted $10,000 from a secret bank account controlled by Rev. Henry J. Lyons, a National Baptist Convention U.S.A. leader who is charged with racketeering. Brown has denied any wrongdoing.

Meanwhile, Brown's daughter, Shantrel, acknowledged that the Lexus was purchased last year by Karim Pouye, Sissoko's chief financial officer, and given just months after Rep. Brown lobbied to keep Sissoko out of federal prison after he pleaded guilty to bribing a customs officer. Shantrel Brown has since sold the car and said the money will go to the African Methodist Episcopal Church scholarship fund.

According to a June 9 affidavit filed by the Capitol Police, Brown accused the reporters of "threatening and intimidating" her.

Times managing editor Neil Brown said the congresswoman's criminal complaint was "a tactic to avoid answering questions. . . . I do not believe for a minute that David Dahl or Bill Adair were anything but professional, polite and conducted themselves in a completely proper manner."

After investigating the charges, the U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of Columbia dropped the case. "It did not meet the standards for federal prosecution," spokesman Channing Phillips told E&P last week.

When asked about the case, the congresswoman's office faxed a statement saying, "It is unfortunate that the civil rights movement in this country must always prove itself — even defend itself when no defense should be necessary."

But the feud didn't end there. At a press conference last week in Jacksonville to explain the $10,000 check she received from Baptist leader Lyons, who is accused of federal money laundering charges, Rep. Brown refused to answer questions from Times reporters and instead blasted the Times:

"As long as I am member of the U.S. Congress, I will never respond to the St. Petersburg Times. They have distorted, misled and purposefully deceived their readers," she said.

Complaints Finally Push Postal Service To Action

The new postmaster general launches a national program aimed at finding and fixing the problems that have long thwarted timely newspaper delivery

IN RESPONSE TO a national chorus of community newspaper publishers' complaints about bad service, the new U.S. Postal Service chief has launched a sweeping initiative designed to find and fix the problems.

Postmaster General William J. Henderson ordered the new push after a June 23 meeting with top execs of the National Newspaper Association. Postal Service reps are now being dispatched across the country to meet with publishers and circulation managers to identify local mailing system bottlenecks.

The NNA has long charged that postal delivery of newspapers has suffered since the 1996 postal reclassification.

A member survey in May found that out-of-county and out-of-state delivery of mailed papers routinely involved delays of six or more days. Daily papers also reported that issues, when they arrive, often come in bunches.

"We have lacked management attention to this problem," said Max Heath, chairman of NNA's postal committee. But now, he noted, the agency seems to be listening.

Delivery quality was a concern of Henderson's in his previous role as Postal Service chief operating officer. He became postmaster general in May.

Henderson also has moved to improve relations with newspapers in other ways. One of his first major actions, a month after his promotion, was to end the Auto Day direct-mail campaign, which guaranteed Friday delivery of ads from car dealers.

Newspapers saw the move as an unfair attempt to hijack their auto advertising and, along with other mailers, criticized the agency for ignoring problems with on-time delivery.

Another bone of contention between newspapers and the Postal Service is its merchandise sales. Henderson told NNA's Publishers' Auxiliary, "Selling T-shirts and ties is not something we ought to be doing." However, the agency has not yet moved to scale back merchandising, said spokeswoman Monica Hand.

"We're looking at the entire system," said Paul Vogel, NNA Postal Service operations support manager for the Great Lakes area.

"We have our clusters and districts dealing with every community newspaper in America as we speak." Vogel also is co-chair of the Mailers Technology Advisory Committee, which works with the Postal Service on mail users' questions and guidance.

One example of the new efforts was a July 25 presentation at the Alabama Press Association's summer convention by Sandra R. Box, USPS Alabama district manager for marketing, and Senny Boone, NNA government relations director. NNA executive director Bill Keller said Box "got an earful" of complaints about late deliveries.

"We had at least one, maybe two, of our delegates say that delivery had gotten so bad that their local postmaster had gotten disgusted and had let them deliver their papers first class at no extra cost," Keller said. "Now, that's against the rules, but that was seen as a way to deal with it."

Box showed a video titled A New Challenge, a Renewed Commitment in which Henderson declared that service must improve, and another video in which a local postal official described efforts with the Alabama Press Association.

"I'm very pleased with the shift in attitude," Keller said, noting that meetings are scheduled with publishers around the state.

Vogel said the Postal Service is developing training programs to help newspapers navigate the postal system. But servicing newspapers is complicated by "a tremendous difference in sophistication" among newspapers, Vogel said.

Some operate modern equipment and have longtime employees conversant with the rules. Others don't.

Heath said one suggestion is to return to sorting mail at sectional facilities, as was done before reclassification. "They wanted to simplify things, but in their effort to simplify things, they didn't make them better," he said.

Vogel said everything is being reviewed, but returning to state classification would probably hurt service. ■

Small Papers Mine New Revenue In Golden State

Yellow pages, people profiles, business features, circulation coupons and more

THE NOTION THAT small dailies and weeklies are generally sleepy — resistant to new ideas and change — was convincingly dispelled at the California Newspaper Publishers Association annual convention.

At the July 16-18 meeting — themed "Connecting with Change" — in Coronado, publishers displayed revenue-enhancing innovations, from community phone books to an Easter coloring contest.

In a session titled "Bringing in the Bucks — Bottom Line Ideas that Work," Randy Goldberg, publisher and CEO of the weekly Paradise Post, said his paper not only turns out its own telephone book, but publishes them for other small newspapers. He said they generate from $150,000 to $500,000 or more in revenue, most of it from new advertisers. The Post's version, he said, took in $202,000 in advertising its first year.

But he didn't say it was easy. First, he stressed, "You need to research your market to find out how your competition is perceived. You also need to figure out what potential yellow-page business is available and how much of that business is running with your competition. Devise a marketing strategy to capture those advertisers."

LEW MERRIM

YELLOW PAGES, NOT JOURNALISM

If a newspaper can't sell more than 25% of the market in its first book, there is a strong probability that consumers will not favor it over the competition, even if it's a better product, Goldberg added. Publishers, he went on, can also expect competing phone book suppliers to "bad mouth" a new book.

"Your competition will not roll over and play dead," he said. "They will come out swinging. But even though the project will be difficult, the contribution potential within a few short years is very impressive. Once you capture the market, a 50% contribution to profit, after direct costs, is quite normal."

Goldberg noted that white-page listings can be purchased from a Baby Bell, although the names must be filtered through a specially written computer program before they can be formatted. He also pointed out that the Post has the advantage of owning a printing company.

He urged first-time phone directory publishers to think in terms of content not found in conventional telephone books. For example, the Post's version contains e-mail addresses for residents who have them, a section on local places of interest, coupons, senior citizen centers and a "Lucky Number" on the cover. Winning numbers are printed in the newspaper, and prizes include gift certificates from local businesses, theater tickets and cash. For the benefit of older users, the book is printed in large type.

ROP YELLOW PAGES

The broadsheet Intermountain News in Burney runs yellow pages in the main paper, publisher Craig Harrington reported. The yellow-colored pages are divided into 2-by-2-inch ads for convenience stores, banks, carpet cleaners, auto repair shops, beauty salons, contractors, dentists, chiropractors, medical clinics, barbers, travel agents and day-care centers.

CITIZEN SPOTLIGHT

Thomas H. Johnson, publisher of the Daily Pilot in Costa Mesa, disclosed that they sold $45,000 worth of ads — and sold out the entire press run — the first year it published a section called 103 Top Citizens. "The revenue is incredible," he exclaimed. "The idea of 103 People was to get away from the 'Top 100' listings that many publications use," he said.

The weekly Alameda Journal in the San Francisco East Bay region developed a Morning, Noon And Night section, which pictorially profiled the community during one 24-hour period. Publisher Scott Little said the editorially driven feature, which brought in $16,000 in ad revenue, celebrated the newspaper's 11th anniversary and the city's 126th birthday. Staff and freelance photographers spread out around town, shooting an early-morning street sweeper, a couple strolling, a first-grader preparing for school, a lone jogger, a telephone lineman at work, a family moving into a new home, parents with their newborn baby, a harpist performing and other everyday scenes.

The weekly Milpitas Post, according to publisher Mort Levine, realizes $20,000 a year from such offerings as Father of the Year, Mother of the Year and Chinese New Year promotions, and an Easter game in which kids are supposed to color in black-and-white pictures in the center of a double truck spread surrounded by small ads.

At the Lake County Publishing Co., two pressmen put together a rewinder from an old roll stand that wasn't in use, an electric motor and some pulley wheels, belts and bearings for $500, recalled Debbie Clark, general manager of the Willits News. Today, she said, the company saves about $5,000 a month by using rewound paper — or $54,000 a year. Lake also publishes the Lake County Record-Bee and Clear Lake Observer-American.

Clark added that the Willits News takes in $10,000 in ad revenue from a spring Hometown Business section. The 1998 tabloid section highlighted a mammogram center, tourist railroad, chiropractic clinic and other enterprises.

INSERTION ORDER TO ASSIGNMENT

Explained Clark: "The ad staff sells the space for the April section in the slower market months of February and March. As soon as a sales commitment is made, it is logged and an insertion order written with the customer's name and phone number and the size purchased. The editorial department then uses these as its work sheet."

Because the News has a small staff, she continued, stringers help out in setting up interviews, taking photos and writing copy. "Our community loves this edition," Clark said. "It puts faces and names together as well as encouraging our readers to shop locally with their friends and neighbors."

The Victorville, Calif., Daily Press hopes for success with a coupon book to sell subscriptions while cutting churn and non-pay stops from telemarketing. Publisher and executive vice president Maureen Brotherton said coupon books offer subscriptions at a $2 discount, plus two $5 certificates for either of two restaurants. The books,

Can A Shelby Coffey Make It In TV Land?

Before the interview began, Coffey took a tape recorder from his desk and asked, apologetically, if he could transcribe his conversation with E&P's reporter

FULL-COLOR PICTURES of Ted, Cokie, Peter, Diane and Sam adorn the wall of the fifth floor reception area at ABC-TV News, a reminder to visitors of the power of celebrity newscasters.

"Those people speak with an authority and interview with an authority that comes from experience and hard work," said Shelby Coffey III, the new executive vice president of ABC News. "That is why they are so successful."

Not long ago, Coffey was starting his third week as vice president of ABC News after ending a nine-year run as editor and executive vice president of the Los Angeles Times.

His résumé is all print: 18 years at the Washington Post where he became the national news editor, then the top jobs of Dallas Times Herald and U.S. News and World Report.

Coffey understands the dynamics of his new position. Before the interview began, he took a tape recorder from his desk, and asked, apologetically, if he could transcribe what turned out to be a 45-minute conversation.

HIS JOB: HELP DAVID WESTIN

"My basic job description is to help David Westin," Coffey said, speaking of the recently crowned president of ABC News. "On editorial issues, organizational issues, including ABC News productions."

David Shaw, the media critic for the Los Angeles Times, worries that the sniping and political infighting that has plagued ABC the past few years might destroy his old boss.

"He is going into a much more competitive position than the one he had at the Los Angeles Times," Shaw said in a telephone interview from his West Coast home. "The media (television) is so different. The competition is more fierce. There are more high-level executives in television than there are in newspapers."

"Shelby has very sound journalistic standards," Shaw continued. "He is a very careful, decent, honorable person who might get chewed up in the dog-eat-dog world of television.

"He tried so hard to be fair when he was here that the paper got criticized for it.

"He would be good for the ABC News division. I'm not sure what authority he has, but he has the ability to make the (20/20 and PrimeTime Live) magazine shows better than they are."

Shaw's analysis was on the mark.

MAGAZINE CRITICISM

Coffey was pummeled last month by an anonymous ABC News correspondent in a New York magazine piece on Westin's ascendancy to the throne of ABC News. Westin, an attorney, became ABC's chief news executive on June 1.

"Oh great," the correspondent told New York. "We've got a guy who doesn't know news (Westin) hiring a guy who doesn't know TV."

Coffey, however, notes he has been analyzing television news since the early 1970s when Roone Arledge, then the network's chief sports executive, took over the network news operation.

"I was running the style section at the Washington Post when that happened (Arledge took over)," Coffey recalled. "It became a big story and it was one that was ongoing. I've been watching and paying attention to ABC News ever since."

Coffey is working to avoid any internal squabbles, meeting frequently with news staffers and executives in what has become an analysis of the entire news operation, and has a good word to say about everybody.

He has ideas he'd like to try out, but is reluctant to talk about them before he can examine the delicate chemistry of the network news operation.

"Come back in six months," he smiled.

Still, he can't help offering hints about the kind of news programming he would like to see at his new news outpost.

"It is especially important for news organizations to have a strong commitment to giving analysis," he said, applauding the World News Tonight segment called "A Closer Look."

'THE UNLIMITED NEWS HOLE'

He is intrigued by "the unlimited news hole" at the network's Internet site. "The aim is to have it coordinated (with the television news programs)," Coffey said.

ABC also intends to use his expertise on the A&E Network. "I was just appointed to the board," he said.

Coffey nods when asked if media criticism — a staple at the Los Angeles Times — might be appropriate on television, and points out that Ted Koppel's Nightline produces specials on media behavior.

Shaw, who occasionally wrote about Coffey's editorial and administrative decisions, said his boss never censored him.

"To be fair, when I wrote about the L.A. Times, I sometimes had to argue a bit more to get it in, but I never was told to keep something out," Shaw said.

"I once wrote a piece on newspaper hiring of minorities and criticized Shelby for hiring 15 high-level white executives.

"He winced, but he didn't try to change it."

Shaw acknowledged the piece pained Coffey because his record on minority recruitment was better than that of his predecessor.

Coffey, in fact, received the Ida B. Wells Award in 1995 from the University of Kansas for recruiting and promoting minority journalists.

"Shelby Coffey had the courage to increase diversity in one of the nation's most dynamic media markets while the L.A. Times was in a period of downsizing," said Samuel L. Adams, the Wells Award curator.

On another occasion, a Shaw series on abortion that contained a negative reference to the Washington Post became an issue.

"Shelby said to make sure it was fair because he didn't want people saying his newspaper was criticizing the Post because he used to work there," Shaw said.

THE FUTURE

Coffey resigned from the Los Angeles Times early last fall after Mark Willes, the newspaper's publisher, announced that he was erasing the ethical wall that separated the news and editorial departments. But he won't talk about the paper he left behind.

"I have nothing but good feelings for the people there," he said.

Should Coffey tire of the internal wrangling that accompanies network news operations, he could be tempted to look 23 blocks south from his West 66th Street office.

"The New York Times is the only newspaper that might appeal to him," said Shaw. "But it is not clear that they would give him a high enough position for him to go there."

Coffey laughed at Shaw's speculation, although he didn't dismiss it.

"I'm very happy here," he said. "It's interesting. I got a call from David Westin the day after I left the Los Angeles Times. ABC is an organization I have admired for a long time."

L.A. Weeklies File For Bankruptcy

WAVE COMMUNITY NEWSPAPERS, a Los Angeles-area group serving black, Latino and Asian neighborhoods with 39 twice-weeklies, has filed for Chapter 11 protection from creditors while it restructures and becomes partly employee-owned. Meanwhile, executive editor and publisher Art Aguilar said in an interview that publication is continuing uninterrupted. Under the reorganization plan, he added, the number of employees actually will increase, to 250, from 80, over four years.

Wave papers, published by Central-News Wave Publications and affiliate Eastern County Newspaper Services Inc., face $1.4 million in debts. According to the Chapter 11 filing last month, Wave hopes to pay off the debts and make capital improvements with a $3 million loan being sought from the Los Angeles Community Development Bank. Aguilar blamed a three-year retail advertising slump, adding, "We are doing all right in national advertising, but the economic boom has not yet trickled down to the small merchants in our circulation areas."

Both operating companies are owned by the Brian Hews family, which would have no role after the restructuring, Aguilar said.

Wave president and CEO Dr. C.Z. Wilson said the company has begun a reorganization designed to make employees the largest shareholders, with about a 40% stake. Senior managers and community leaders also will have a stake, he said. Wave distributes about 500,000 free copies in the South Central and Southeast Los Angeles area.

Executive publisher Ric Trent said there are more than 4 million people in the service area, and less than 15% receive a daily paper at home, so the Wave is the only way for businesses to reach consumers in the neighborhoods. Aguilar said immediate plans call for adding special editions on health care, employment, business development and family financial planning.

Spokesman Robert Alaniz said a loan was under consideration by the bank, an agency involving the city of Los Angeles, Los Angeles County, and the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. He declined to speculate about ownership if the loan is made. — M.L. Stein

When In Wine Country, Pop The Cork And Pour

In the heart of the U.S. viticulture, the Santa Rosa Press Democrat extends its expertise to the Web. Wine closet? Turn left at newsroom.

IF YOU'RE A newspaper in the heart of the wine country and maintain two wine closets, why not offer wine information Web sites? That's exactly what the Santa Rosa Press Democrat is doing — in grand style.

PD's Wine URLs

winerave.com

The Sonoma County, Calif., daily has just launched WineToday (winetoday.com), which covers the California wine industry and supplements the print newspaper's already strong coverage of what is not only a major economic factor, but a cultural obsession in Northern California.

The site offers reports on wine industry stock offerings, mergers, personnel changes, plus news of wines and wineries. It is aimed mainly at aficionados, but is accessible to laymen.

"There are no sites out there that focus exclusively on California," said executive editor Bruce Kyse. "The site is really going to have a news orientation, built on the concept that wine is news. And, of course, there will be a hearty helping of wine tastings and reviews. We want to not only give readers descriptions of the wine, but comparisons as well. It will be sort of like the Amazon.com model. When someone has read a wine review, he or she will be told, 'If you like this wine, here are some other wines in this category you might like.'"

WineToday also capitalizes on the Press Democrat's extensive wine database, which includes reviews of 1,300 wines, prices and stories from the news library.

Wine, of course, has been well covered for years by California newspapers, several of which run wine features in their food sections.

WineToday is the fourth wine-oriented site launched by the New York Times Co. paper. Its earlier incarnation, the Tasting Room, has been folded into WineToday. The two others are Wine Files (winefiles.com), which online publications director Jeff Moriarty calls the "Yahoo of wine," and Wine Rave (winerave.com), a chat site for wine lovers.

Advertising director Ken Svanum is confident the new site will produce retail sales on the Web. He noted that although many states prohibit the shipment of wine across state lines, wineries also sell a bundle of other items such as T-shirts, fancy corkscrews and wine racks. "A lot of our success will depend upon our ability to generate traffic to the site," he said.

Svanum said the newspaper plans to link WineToday to a New York Times Web site. "If we get a favorable linking, say, a hypertext link to our site for anyone wanting wine information on the New York Today site, there could be a whole lot of people coming to us," he added. "But at this point we are just feeling our way through a lot of things." The other two wine sites do not carry advertising.

The Press Democrat keeps two wine closets, one in the main office, the second at a downtown location for the Web site only. For some time, the newspaper has brought in expert wine tasters whose opinions it publishes. The closet in the main building holds about 700 bottles, but the the new one is expected to be much bigger.

The tasters for the Web site are its two editors, Leslie Sbrocco and Tim Fish, who is leaving his position as PD food and wine writer. A third staffer, who will write and edit copy, is being sought.

Wineries supply part of its closet stash, and the newspaper buys the rest. "We tell a winery we are planning to test a chardonnay, for example, and they send us two bottles," Kyse said. "Overall, we get much more wine than we can possibly use so we donate the overflow to charity groups, who auction if off at fund-raisers. At these events, you will see cases with the Press Democrat's name on them, which is good publicity for us. Some cases go for as much as $400."

Free wine for the staff? Alas, no. Other employees have to sip the grape on their own time and own dime, said managing editor Bob Swofford. "We have a strict rule about that," he disclosed. "There are only two keys for the closets and we have them."

Svanum believes WineToday will make money through a two-pronged ad strategy. First, sales reps are targeting the dozens of wineries in Sonoma and adjacent Napa counties. But long term, he hopes the site will attract national advertisers. "We think the demographics of our readers will be very high, and with that comes the opportunity to sell to national advertisers, whether it be Mercedes-Benz, high-end jewelers or whomever."

"We think the demographics of our readers will be very high, and with that comes the opportunity to sell to national advertisers, whether it be Mercedes-Benz, high-end jewelers or whomever"

Svanum said the New York Times is forming a national sales structure for its Web site "and we are having conversations with them about helping us on the national side."

California Network Surge

THE CALIFORNIA NEWSPAPER Publishers Association's ad network billed $80 million in the past fiscal year and expects $270 million or more in placements in the current year.

At its annual convention in Coronado recently, CNPA reported on its California Newspaper Network, a "one-order, one-bill" sales operation for member newspapers that began in 1992 with billings of $800,000. George Riggs, publisher of the Walnut Creek-based Contra Costa Times and president-elect of CNPA, said the network is "on track to far and away exceed" its budgeted $270 million in placement for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1999.

Ad Forecast Rosier

THE ECONOMY'S CONTINUING vitality and a strong advertising market should lift U.S. ad spending by 6.8% this year, surpassing $200 billion for the first time, according to ad forecaster Robert Coen, who six months earlier predicted 6.2% growth.

While stronger than expected, 1998 growth would still be the slowest since 1993's 5.2% gain, said Coen, who has tracked ad spending for 48 years and is senior vice president at the ad agency McCann-Erickson Worldwide.

In his first look at 1999, Coen said U.S. ad spending should rise 6%, with momentum building in the second half as 2000 approaches. He expects U.S. ad spending to hit $200.3 billion this year, from $187.5 billion in 1997.

National ad spending, which includes network TV commercials and magazine ads, is expected to grow 7% this year, Coen said, while local ad spending such as classified newspaper ads and commercials on local TV and radio stations is expected to rise 6.5%.

AJ-C Takes Honor

TOP HONORS — AND a $5,000 prize — in the Newspaper Association of America/Advertising Age Marketing Achievement Awards went to the Atlanta Journal-Constitution for its launch of a zoned weekly section for suburban Cherokee County. The multimedia promotion helped lift county weekday subscriptions 18.7%, 12.7% on Sunday.

AP Expands Photo Archive, Rolls Out Server

ADDING IMAGES AT a rate of 200 new photos per day and as many old pictures per week, the Associated Press is amassing what in all likelihood is the world's largest repository of news photography.

Growing library of new, old, overseas pix may add access to others'

Helping the process is the impending consolidation of the wire service's North American archives with those from Europe and Asia. At the same time, the AP is offering members easier downloading, lower fees, a new server for their picture desks, and the possibility of access to third-party photos carried by the service's satellite-delivery network.

The changes should be good news to members' newsrooms. They mean not only more photos, but also a greater variety of news and historical pictures, faster access to those images, better handling of the files on the newspapers' end and lower costs.

In general, service and equipment improvements, said AP director of operations/business development Jim Gerberich, "provide greater flexibility to our member newspapers" for access to all available images.

By midyear, the AP said its Photo Archive contained approximately 410,000 images. Though most are no more than three years old, thousands are digitized older pictures that were gradually added from a library of prints and negatives.

The practice of selecting, scanning, compressing (recent to 0.5 MB at 200 dpi, historical to 1.5 MB at 300 dpi) and digitally archiving (with caption and IPTC header information) more material from that collection of 50 million paper prints and film negatives will resume shortly, according to Grant Lamos III, AP editorial director for photo systems.

The AP also plans to merge its Asian and three European archives with its North American archive, which operates at its Cranbury, N.J., facility. The decision was made, said Lamos, when the AP realized there no longer was a need for local overseas hubs' separate archives: Near universal use of the Internet's World Wide Web as one big wide area network obviated the need to operate costly point-to-point ISDN lines.

From Cranbury, Gerberich said that North American and overseas members and clients were asking for each others' photos — the collection and indexing of which will continue at several locations. The AP, he said, will "take the best of the collections . . . over the last two or three years" for the "international" portion of the archive (which, from the user's standpoint, he added, is indistinguishable from the rest of the archive).

The archive's principal advantages, according to Gerberich, are its speed (although he allows there are reliability issues concerning Internet traffic) compared with phoned-in requests for an AP staffer to conduct a search and the ability to view search results instead of listening to descriptions of images turned up by a searcher.

When a member newspaper requests a special transmission, it now pays $40 instead of $75; if it conducts its own Web browser-based natural-language search and download (each taking an average of 30 seconds), it pays only $25 per picture.

In another change, archived photos can be downloaded immediately from the multiple-display screen of search results, not just the individual one-up previews.

Lamos said picture-availability discussions are under way with organizations that send their own photo reports over AP PhotoExpress, a service that shares satellite capacity with the AP's PhotoStream news photo report to members. He said many scenarios are under consideration that would give PhotoStream users access to these third parties' pictures.

For members to receive and process wire photos, the news service began rolling out the AP Server in earnest this year. By now installed at well over 200 newspapers, the server's "most noticeable" differences from its purpose-built, Token Ring-networked predecessor are (with the exception of certain integration requirements) its off-the-shelf components, network neutrality and full-featured front end with Web browser interface.

The multimedia replacement for the AP picture desk's Leaf server is an OS/2 machine with a 233MHz Pentium II CPU and 64 MB of RAM, with standard Ethernet networking, server software that includes the same search engine employed by the AP Archive and the NewsLynx Macintosh browser and a cross-platform Web browser.

Designed to eventually access more than just still image files, AP Server is the member's end of what the AP now calls ObjectStream, the successor to PhotoStream that delivers multimedia objects in native file formats.

There are many reasons to attend

Editor & Publisher's 10th Annual INTERACTIVE NEWSPAPERS CONFERENCE

February 17-20, Hyatt Regency, Atlanta, Georgia

Attendees consistently give this conference high marks for a lot of different reasons. Program content is primary. But we also make sure our conferences are enjoyable experiences ... well planned for the convenience of attendees.

We make sure the conference site can accommodate our 1,000+ attendees comfortably. That the sessions are timed appropriately. Breaks are convenient. The vendor trade show is complete and easily accessible. Conference materials are well planned and easily understood. That there is adequate time and convenient settings for networking. That it's easy for attendees to take care of business during the conference. And many more subtle details that can facilitate getting all you can out of the experience.

The Editor & Publisher Annual Interactive Newspapers Conference is celebrating its 10th anniversary in 1999! We work hard to accommodate a diversity of interests, to present a range of points of view and content so that all who attend leave feeling informed, motivated and satisfied. It's important to your company. It's important to you. It's important to us.

Plan now to attend Interactive Newspapers '99. Where you will renew friendships from past conferences and meet new colleagues. All under one roof. All sharing new ideas, experiences and a wealth of knowledge and information.

New Names At Nexpo

Canadian makes Nexpo debut; software for traders, catalogs

AMONG NEW EXHIBITORS at Nexpo '98 were two relatively young companies showing ad- and image-management systems using QuarkXPress.

Over five years, Montreal-based Cenosis has developed a range of editorial, advertising and Web publishing software for more than 50 customers, at least five dailies among them. At Nexpo it featured the CenoPub display ad-management system.

Though its "clients are all in Canada thus far," said business development vice president Ted Markle, Cenosis reached a European-distribution agreement in January with Paris-based Axxor Informatique.

In order to assure that only correct versions of ads are published, said Markle, "we move your ads through your workflow based on your statuses."

CenoPub tracks work on a per-edition basis, but provides workflow views of multiple editions and publications. Ads and ad elements can be previewed at full size or as thumbnails. It relies on an SQL NT Server, while the actual file storage can be on any machine and clients may be Windows PCs or Macintoshes.

CenoPub accepts data from any ad order-entry and ad layout systems, said Markle. Features include OPI integration, automatic archiving, quick pick-up of earlier ad versions and easily accessed client storage folders.

The Transporter user interface, driven by ad jacket numbers, allows ad files to be checked out from the server and returned as EPS file — all the while recording time idle and time at work. It also supplies average in-use times and deadline performance for individual staffers and ads, according to Markle. A record of each ad's history includes time spent on modifications.

An Internet reception module will flow ads received over the Internet and notify the appropriate operators. The system can direct all EPS files to print editions and all GIF images to Web output.

The Edition Viewer interface allows versatile tracking of any night's ads, said Markle, so that problems can be identified and explained before a customer complains.

CenoPub's customizable MIS interface is used to define statuses, groups, users and workflow(s).

CenoPub is installed at the company's biggest customer, the 258,574-circulation (328,533 Saturday) Journal de Montreal. Farther north, CenoAd handles classified ad input and production for Le Soleil, Quebec City. At the Unimedia (Hollinger) daily, said Markle, the system converts QuarkXPress content into HTML for online listings using CenoWeb software.

Le Quotidien, Unimedia's 29,512-circulation daily in Chicoutimi, Quebec, is the sole user of the CenoText editorial system, which offers production status management and automates version control and proofing. Markle said Cenosis will demonstrate a second version of that software — in the works for an unnamed client — at Nexpo '99.

Yet another product, CenoDataPub, is designed to streamline production of monthly for-sale (car, home, etc.) booklets, catalogs, listings and directories. The system works from within XPress with an existing database, linking images with their related text.

Similarly, Jintek, with offices in San Diego and Bangkok, Thailand, used Nexpo to focus on its latest product, Treasure Pro. The catalog building and database publishing software is slated for imminent release at about $1,000, according to marketing executives Hans Hartman and Sonja Chalkley.

Founded two years ago as Street Logic Software, Jintek's half-dozen QuarkXTensions also include 2D- and 3D-type effects, access to XPress features, imported page element placement and repetitive task scripting.

Treasure Pro is a combined database management and publishing program for "image-rich documents" that works within XPress (for Mac now, Windows later this year). It can record/automate tasks in editable AppleScript and can output for Web-based searching. Remote access through HTML export of the asset database (with automatic conversion to GIF) gives co-workers and/or clients the same search capability that is offered in XPress.

Though its automation features are tailored principally for catalog production, Treasure Pro appeared to have application to certain listing, directory or calendar sections and to semicommercial jobs handled by newspapers. The software can be used to locate, preview and place images onto pages, drop them into picture boxes, link them to text boxes or, using templates, generate an entire section or publication. A designated shape can be pulled onto the screen and the image positioned and fit.

An XPress file automatically will reflect the latest changes to stored text and images. When ready to output an XPress file, Treasure Pro gathers all assigned images.

Multiple image catalogs can be opened and searched simultaneously, with sorting by name, location or other attribute.

CASCADE SYSTEMS INC., Andover, Mass., and the Associated Press, New York, introduced photo-assignment tracking modules for their archiving systems. Both can use Web browser clients.

An option for its Preserver, the AP's JobMinder uses FileMaker Pro for users to create assignment requests for review, approval and assignment via hard copy, e-mail or pager.

Completed jobs are scanned in and captions are entered into JobMinder's assignment form. Image, caption and assignment data then automatically move into the Preserver archive, with caption and assignment data parsed into appropriate IPTC and custom fields.

Cascade's PhotoTrak allows editors to generate, schedule, track and report on photo and graphic assignments, through to final image selection and adjustment.

Photographs and graphics, along with information about the images and assignments, are automatically indexed and stored in Cascade's MediaSphere archive. Status changes automatically trigger e-mail messages.

GATF Guide To Color Management

THE GRAPHIC ARTS Technical Foundation, Sewickley, Pa., has published the GATF Practical Guide to Color Management.

The book, by GATF research scientist Richard Adams II and Intergraph Digital Publishing Division marketing director Joshua B. Weisberg, explains how to integrate color management into a production workflow.

It teaches color theory, guides readers through device calibration and characterization, reviews hardware and color-management software characteristics, demonstrates how color-management tools relate to specific jobs, and includes a brief history of color measurement and instruments. The chapter "Visual Color Evaluation" shows how technical settings affect image appearance.

THE CENTER ON CRIME, COMMUNITIES & CULTURE

CRIME & COMMUNITIES MEDIA FELLOWSHIP

THE FELLOWSHIP

The Center on Crime, Communities & Culture of the Open Society Institute announces a new fellowship program to allow journalists to cover in-depth stories on crime, criminal justice, violence and the search for just and practical solutions to public safety. The Center will fund journalists for six months to a year to cover one or more criminal justice stories of their choice. The average one-year grant will be $50,000.

WHO SHOULD APPLY

Print, TV, radio and photojournalists with 3 or more years of experience are invited to submit proposals. Fellows will be required to produce publishable or broadcast-ready works. The Center encourages, but does not require, participation by applicant's employers. Letters of commitment from editors and producers to consider publishing or airing works are also required. Fellows may begin their project anytime in 1999.

ABOUT THE CENTER

The Center on Crime, Communities & Culture of the Open Society Institute seeks to create a better understanding of and support for effective and humane responses to crime in order to enhance the safety of all communities. The Center supports innovative programs and research in criminal justice and public safety and provides fellowships to people committed to becoming leaders in the field. The Center seeks projects representing a variety of viewpoints and is committed to protecting the integrity and independence of each Fellow's work.

PAPERS FACE SERIOUS CLASSIFIED THREATS

While kicking off a major initiative to help newspapers fight back, API's conference highlights major threats to classified advertising for the next century

by Martha L. Stone

The mission is clear for newspapers: Change the way classified sales and presentation are handled online, or face a massive erosion of market share and profitability. The marching orders were the product of last week's four-day conference, "Working the Web: Classified Advertising in the 21st Century" at the American Press Institute in Reston, Va.

The conference kicked off a yearlong, $70,000 study designed to inform newspaper decision makers how to reverse the success of nontraditional competitors like Microsoft and Yahoo!, and to place newspaper companies in a dominant position in auto, real estate and employment classified advertisements online. The rules have changed quickly for Web classifieds, and unless the newspaper industry adopts new sales models, their $18 billion per year classified empire may crumble. The newspaper industry currently relies on classified advertising for up to 40% of its revenue.

Admittedly, newspapers have a lot of work to do, concluded the gathering of newspaper executives, classified sales managers, academics and industry analysts. "I think we need to redefine our classifieds," said Henry "Buzz" Wurzer, vice president of New York City-based Hearst Corp. and a seminar participant. "Ninety-eight percent of our [classified] revenue doesn't come from online. We need to take our auto, real estate, employment, and now auction [classifieds], and add editorial."

"We need to redefine our classifieds. Ninety-eight percent of our [classified] revenue doesn't come from online."

— Henry "Buzz" Wurzer, vice president of Hearst Corp.

Competition From All Corners

Meanwhile, powerful forces in classified advertising are gaining momentum among online users. Consider:

- Microsoft's CarPoint.com of Redmond, Wash., which points to hundreds of car dealership inventory databases across the nation, is an efficiently handled and cleverly constructed site allowing users to research and buy cars online. Seminar participants lamented CarPoint's thorough sales tactics, particularly their follow-up on whether customers were satisfied with the transaction or not. In the Boston market alone, CarPoint has signed up 45 dealers to post their interactive databases. Last year, Cars.com was launched by Classified Ventures Inc., a Chicago-based consortium of 62 newspapers, to compete head-to-head with CarPoint.com.
- Rent.net, owned by Cendant Corp. of Parsippany, N.J., pays apartment brokers for its classified listings, calling the listings "content." Some seminar participants reported that it was difficult to answer this question from Rent.Net participants: "Why should we pay to advertise with you when we get paid for listings on Rent.Net?"

Martha L. Stone teaches new media at Roosevelt University in Chicago.

◆ Yahoo! Inc. of Santa Clara, Calif., offers users free classified ads, with the ability to change or remove them at any time. Many users report successful results using the ads.

◆ Growing in popularity is the new type of classified advertisement — the auction, where sales of Beanie Babies and antiques rule. Lou Golden, manager of New York City's Auction Universe, a Times Mirror company that works with a variety of newspapers including the Hartford (Conn.) Courant, Los Angeles Times and Minneapolis Star Tribune, reports that competition is fierce in this nascent segment of the online industry. Established competitor eBay.com of San Jose, Calif., recently featured nearly 550,000 items for sale, while Auction Universe typically hosts 15,000 auctions at any one time. The auction industry's promise is that those who place bids on the site stay an average of 58 minutes per session and 14 hours per week.

◆ Despite the fact that The Monster Board site of Los Angeles has a small percentage of the job listings compared with the newspaper industry's CareerPath.com, it is still wildly popular on the Web. And several online measurement agencies say it remains the most popular online employment site. Keith Yocum, classified manager for Boston.com, reports that The Monster Board has only 38,000 listings, which are posted for five to six weeks, while CareerPath has almost eight times that number, which stay up for just two weeks. The Washington Post alone reports 27,000 employment listings. That strength can be leveraged and marketed better, conference participants said.

"We need to grab a bigger share," Yocum said, adding that the task can be accomplished with the newspaper industry's strong community attachment and recognizable brand names. "Newspaper brands are absolutely powerful."

In Short

CAR TALK ON CARS.COM
Classified Ventures' Cars.com will now feature editorial material from cartalk.com, the Web site of "Car Talk," the popular call-in show on National Public Radio. In exchange, the show's hosts will promote Cars.com on their show and Web site. Owned by seven large newspaper groups, Classified Ventures called the deal a "multimillion dollar agreement."

Online Syndication

REAL MEDIA BECOMES WEB SYNDICATOR

Firm has vast online network

by Carl Sullivan

In a move that could eventually make it a syndicator powerhouse, New York City's Real Media Inc. recently announced that it will syndicate its first editorial feature, an online computer guide. Real Media is an advertising distribution and marketing firm that distributes Web ads to an impressive network of over 500 online newspaper sites nationwide.

Because of this extensive network, Real Media could become a new player in the online syndication field.

The firm's first syndicated product is "Maven," a guide to personal computers produced by Business Week Online of New York City and NSTL, a technology testing firm in Conshohocken, Pa.

Under the deal, newspapers will be allowed to co-brand Maven's content and sell half of the site's advertising to local businesses. The editorial product itself is free to newspapers. Business Week will retain the other half of the ad inventory, which will be sold by Real Media sales reps. Real Media executives believe local high-tech businesses will be very interested in purchasing ads on the site, which will feature the names of the local media outlet and Business Week Online.

A spokesperson for Real Media said the firm would likely syndicate other editorial features in the future.

In Short

WHICH CITY SITE IS NO. 1? Knight Ridder and Cox Enterprises both recently claimed more visitors to their city guide networks than any other sites. Who's telling the truth? Both. Cox claims to be No. 1 in May while Knight Ridder claims the top spot for June. And both companies are relying on audience measurement numbers from different rating companies. Knight Ridder's Real Cities network attracted more June visitors than any other city guide network on the Web, according to RelevantKnowledge, an Atlanta firm that measures Internet audiences. Headquartered in San Jose, Calif., Real Cities attracted 2.2 million visitors in June, which is nearly double the 1.3 million visitors to Yahoo!'s Metro sites. Cox Interactive Media, based in Atlanta, attracted more May visitors, according to New York City's Media Metrix, a competitor of RelevantKnowledge. Cox received 46% of the total pages viewed from an analysis group that included Digital City, sidewalk.com, CitySearch and Real Cities. Cox operates 20 city sites and four specialty sites. Real Cities is a network of 40 Web sites, including 28 community guides like Philadelphia Online and Charlotte.com. The other dozen sites are specialty content providers.

Reporter's Digital How-To

INFILTRATING D.C., DIGITALLY

To understand capital insiders, visit http://www.pathfinder.com/CQ

If you want to think the way Washington insiders think, start by reading what they read, like the Congressional Quarterly. Founded in 1945 by newspaperman Nelson Poynter, the Congressional Quarterly these days has online facilities to share regularly updated news and analysis on current events, perspective pieces on state and local government, as well as information on seminars and publications and directions to related sites.

Central to the Congressional Quarterly site is Vote Watch, a feature of particular value to reporters and editors during an election season like this one. Operated in conjunction with Time Warner's Pathfinder feature, the service enables you to track your local representatives' votes on key issues in both the Senate and the House of Representatives. Visit the site and note how the resulting screen provides a form in which you can enter the senator or representative's last name, the state, ZIP code and/or voting district.

Other fields on the form let you:

- specify whether you want to search for votes taken in the past day, two days, week, two weeks, month, or longer period.
- enter a bill name or keyword.
- indicate a subject, choosing from agriculture, appropriations, defense/veterans affairs, economics, labor, budget, finance/taxes, environment/science, energy, foreign policy, government operations, health, education/welfare, housing, lobbyists, the judiciary, politics/elections, trade/transportation and so on.

Fill in any or all of the fields and click on the button, "Get Congressional Voting Records." The site displays a list of bills that meet your specifications and whether the representative(s) voted yea or nay. Titles of all the bills are hyperlinked, so you can click on any bill title to receive the Congressional Quarterly's story on that particular vote, along with background on the issue.

And you don't have to specify just one senator or representative for your search. Let's say you want to see if all of Kentucky's representatives voted the same way on tobacco legislation over the past year and a half. Leave blank the form's field for the representative's last name, then enter "KY" in the state field, the keyword "tobacco" in the search field and select 18 months in the time frame field. The resulting display shows that Kentucky's Democrats and Republicans generally were in accord on tobacco bills.

The site can also be used to stay on top of current congressional news. Icons on the introductory page can be clicked to reach the Congressional Quarterly's story on the latest House and Senate votes on key issues. With each article is a table listing how all the representatives voted and who did not cast a vote on the matter.

The Congressional Quarterly also provides a general news service called American Voter (http://voter96.cqalert.com), which serves up reports on current high-profile issues, links to related political sites and a database of Congressional Quarterly material. Also useful is an On the Job section with assorted information on all members of Congress. On the resulting screen, enter the last name of the senator or representative, a ZIP code or a state, and click on "Start." You then can view a profile of the member with political history and voting records, copies of his or her recent floor speeches, bills introduced in the current session and recent committee votes.

To find other Web sites dealing with Congress and voting, see the Library of Congress site (http://lcweb.loc.gov/). It has links to the House Clerk's Office, the Senate Web, the Vote Smart Project and C-SPAN, as well as congressional rating services by everyone from the American Civil Liberties Union to the Christian Coalition.

Finally, about the source of material used in the Congressional Quarterly sites, note the page uses documents from major CQ publications, including:

1. CQ Weekly Report, the company's flagship newsmagazine.
2. The daily Congressional Monitor, which provides news summaries of floor activities, press conferences, committee meetings and other events.
3. The CQ Researcher, which takes a weekly, single-topic focus on current affairs.
4. Washington Alert, with a database of legislation and regulatory affairs. For instance, do you need to see how lawmakers voted when the House passed the Motor Voter Registration bill back in 1994? This site can give you the yeas and the nays.
5. CQ Books, with material from textbooks and trade references.

KR doubles net

KNIGHT RIDDER, THE nation's second largest newspaper company, reported net income doubled, to $126.9 million, during the second quarter of 1998. But, adjusting for a one-time gain from the sale of an asset, earnings rose 10%, to $66.9 million.

Quarterly operating income fell 7.2%, to $127.1 million, dragged down by $11 million in corporate relocation costs. Revenues rose 9.5%, to $779.3 million, as newspapers posted strong advertising revenue gains in Detroit, Philadelphia, Charlotte, N.C., Fort Worth, Texas, and St. Paul, Minn.

Advertising in San Jose, Calif., was soft and Miami remained flat. Knight Ridder says it is on pace to increase earnings 15% on the year.

Charge cuts Times Mirror's net

TAKING A CHARGE of almost $40 million for restructuring, Times Mirror Co. reported second-quarter net income declined 25%, to $49.2 million, as revenues rose 5.8%, to $760 million. Times Mirror expects to continue taking charges totaling up to $275 million by the end of the year, and the restructuring may involve layoffs. The company also expects to double the pace of its stock buy-back plan.

Newspapers, led by the flagship Los Angeles Times, posted $585 million in revenues, up 7.9%, while a $34.9 million charge to renegotiate a newspaper distribution deal pushed profits down 26%, to $85 million. Excluding the charge, newspaper earnings were up 4.3%, to $120 million.

Washington Post profit slips

SECOND-QUARTER NET INCOME declined 10.6%, to $63.8 million, at the Washington Post Co. While revenues rose almost 5%, to $525.7 million, operating income declined 3.1%, to $106.4 million, as newsprint expenses jumped 15% and spending increased on new media and new printing facilities.

At the flagship Washington Post, revenues increased 4%, though advertising volume was down 1%, compared with the same quarter in 1997.

McClatchy Co. net off

SACRAMENTO-BASED MCCLATCHY NEWSPAPER Co. reported net income dropped 5.3%, to $16.7 million, in the second quarter.

Revenues surged 65%, to $267 million, and operating income rose 61%, to $52.5 million — the gains largely the result of the acquisition of the Minneapolis-based Star Tribune, which came onto the company's books during the quarter.

Net income fell due to interest, taxes, amortization and depreciation associated with the purchase. Excluding the Star Tribune, earnings rose 17.2%, said CEO Gary Pruitt.

Comic Characters Seen In Windows

NOW YOU CAN see and hear Garfield burp when emptying the Windows 98 Recycle Bin.

The cartoon cat — as well as characters from "Cathy," "Doonesbury," "FoxTrot" and "Peanuts" — are featured on Microsoft Plus! 98 software.

When users select themes from these comics, Windows icons are replaced by cartoon characters. Each comic theme's wallpaper includes a link to the strip's Web site, while each screensaver either animates characters or flashes color panels from Sunday strips.

United Media distributes Charles Schulz's "Peanuts," while Universal Press Syndicate handles Jim Davis' "Garfield," Cathy Guisewite's "Cathy," Garry Trudeau's "Doonesbury" and Bill Amend's "FoxTrot."

Speaking of "FoxTrot," the comic last month signed its 900th newspaper client. And its Web site is now getting over 6 million hits a month.

Strip Stars Student And Millionaire

"FREE FOR ALL" has been introduced by King Features Syndicate.

Brett Merhar's daily and Sunday comic stars a "naive" community college student named Jonny, his "scheming" multimillionaire friend Clay, his veterinarian neighbor Paula and anti-social ferret Angus D. Khan.

There are also cameos by pop-culture characters such as Bill Gates, Dennis Rodman, Ellen DeGeneres, and Gillian Anderson and David Duchovny of the X-Files.

Merhar, 27, began drawing "Free For All" when he was a Colorado State University student in 1992.

Early clients include the Atlanta Journal and Constitution, Denver Post, Los Angeles Times, San Francisco Examiner and Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

'Crossfire' Co-Host Creating Column

A CO-HOST OF CNN's Crossfire is writing a political column for the Los Angeles Times Syndicate starting Aug. 4.

Bill Press

The liberal Bill Press has done op-ed pieces for the Los Angeles Times, Sacramento Bee, San Francisco Chronicle, Washington Post and Washington Times.

Press — a frequent guest on ABC's Politically Incorrect, C-Span's Washington Journal and CNBC's Equal Time — has won four Emmys and been voted best commentator of the year by the Associated Press in 1992.

He has also worked in politics, including a three-year stint as chairman of the California Democratic Party.

Creators Get Under Covers

TWO COMICS STARRING animals have spawned books from Andrews McMeel Publishing.

Citizen Dog is the first collection of Mark O'Hare's Universal Press Syndicate strip of the same name.

And the Mutts Little Big Book features various characters from "Mutts" by Patrick McDonnell of King Features Syndicate.

Also, Copley News Service manners columnist Letitia Baldrige — who was first lady Jacqueline Kennedy's social secretary — has written In the Kennedy Style: Magical Evenings in the Kennedy White House (Madison Press/Doubleday). Included are menus and recipes by former White House chef Rene Verdon.

Jonny gets an offer to go heir-less in Brett Merhar's "Free For All."

People Picked To Get Prizes

UNIVERSAL PRESS SYNDICATE editorial cartoonist Ted Rall has received a Deadline Club Award from the New York chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists.

Also, Copley News Service travel columnist Judith Morgan has won three awards from the Western chapter of the Society of American Travel Writers.

And self-syndicated "Capital Connections" celebrity columnist Karen Feld has received two awards from the National Federation of Press Women.

Food Scientist Cooks Up Feature

A COLUMN BY Shirley Corriher has been added to the Los Angeles Times Syndicate's "FoodStyles" package.

Corriher is an Atlanta-based food scientist and author of CookWise: The Hows and Whys of Successful Cooking.

Hollister Has NIE Material

HOLLISTER PUBLICATION Services has formed an NIE syndication company called Hollister Kids.

The new firm's supplements cover subjects such as elections, sports and technology. HK also distributes "Newspaper Plus," a weekly print and Web feature.

Staffers at the Haverford, Pa.-based HK (877-NIE-KIDS) have created Newspaper in Education products for the Philadelphia Inquirer and dailies in Detroit and San Francisco.

'Fashion Police' Cops LATS Deal

"FASHION POLICE" COLUMNIST Jeannine Stein is being distributed by the Los Angeles Times Syndicate.

Her weekly Q&A feature — which discusses what to wear and not to wear — appears in the Los Angeles Times.

Jeannine Stein

Before joining the Times, Stein worked for the now-defunct Los Angeles Herald Examiner and Houston Post.

Thomson Targets Four For New Jobs

DEBORAH DREYFUSS-TUCHMAN has been named director of business development at Thomson Target Media.

She was formerly director of syndicated sales, a position now filled by Paul Morgan. He was previously TTM sales training manager and CoverStory product manager.

Also, Susan De Joris has been promoted from product manager of TTM's Curiocity offerings to director of entertainment products.

And Betsy Fuerstenberg is the new sales development coordinator at TTM.

Trio Of Tribuners Get Appointments

TRIBUNE MEDIA SERVICES has made three appointments.

Aylesa Singley was named account executive/commercial sales for TMS TV Listings. Also, Barbara Bradley was named Southeast account executive and Rhonda McClintock Western account executive for TMS and Knight Ridder/Tribune Information Services.

Singley formerly worked for Showtime Networks, Bradley for the Chicago Sun-Times and McClintock for the Detroit News and Detroit Free Press.

Cartoons Bag Mag Mentions

THE JULY ISSUE of Details — the pop, arts and music magazine — gave "Tom the Dancing Bug" an "up" on its popularity meter.

Ruben Bolling's comic, which started in alternative weeklies, is now distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

In other magazine news, the June/July Civilization from the Library of Congress featured a special 30-page section on cartoons.

The section — guest-edited by Universal editorial cartoonist Jules Feiffer — included a Studs Terkel piece on "The Katzenjammer Kids," a Pete Hamill piece on Milton Caniff and Roy Crane, and about 20 other articles.

Globe Distributes Advice Dispenser

AN ADVICE COLUMN called "Ask Sadie" is being distributed by Globe Syndicate of Strasburg, Va.

The feature is by Marnie Winston-Macauley, whose work has appeared on ABC Online and America Online. She has also authored several books and written for TV's As the World Turns.

He Essays An Essay Column

JEFF STIMPSON IS self-syndicating a weekly essay column that discusses family life and other topics.

The Sunnyside, N.Y.-based writer (jtstimpson@aol.com) has done work for papers such as the New York Post and Wall Street Journal.

Global Honors For Exec/Cartoonist

A SYNDICATE EXECUTIVE/cartoonist recently traveled around the world to accept several awards and conduct other business.

Jerry Robinson — a cartoonist since the late 1930s and now president/editorial director of the Cartoonists & Writers Syndicate — was honored in locales such as Slovenia, Italy, China, Japan, Mexico, Brazil and Argentina.

Jerry Robinson

He also curated a cartoon exhibition in Slovenia, served as president of a cartoon festival jury in Italy, signed a contract for CWS to syndicate cartoons from a Chinese daily newspaper, and met in Tokyo with a company planning an animated film version of the Robinson/Sidra Cohn-created Astra: A Comic Book Opera.

Biz Columnist Is Introduced

BUSINESS COLUMNIST DON Taylor is being distributed by Lighthouse Syndication.

Taylor's credentials include authoring the Up Against the Wal-Marts book.

The Canyon, Texas-based Lighthouse (806-655-7121) also syndicates "Cop An Attitude" by food/health writer Sally Mosier and "BestYears" by baby-boom commentator Mike Bellah.

Business Wire Names S.F. Exec

BUSINESS WIRE HAS named Frank Pettinger regional sales manager/San Francisco. He previously worked for Knight Ridder.

Circulation Sense

3. Involuntary bonding. Newspaper employees who quit or are fired are still entitled to money they're owed. Under similar circumstances, not only do some papers withhold earnings due carriers, they also appropriate bond money that carriers have on account. Bonds ensure that carriers who quit their routes don't leave unpaid balances. Papers where carriers don't do collections still require performance bonds — often used to "punish" carriers. Even carriers who depart on good terms can still wait months before their bond is returned.

2. Only boobs tube. Mailmen who drive vehicles equipped with right-handed steering simply stick their hands out the window to make a delivery.

Carriers who are required to deliver to roadside newspaper "tubes" need to drive on the wrong side of the road or to have six-foot arms. At the very least, tubes double delivery time, since carriers are forced to go up one side of the street and down the other. The added time is actually higher, since they have to come to a full stop, causing excessive wear on car brakes.

1. Complaint charges. Reporters don't get fined for writing flawed stories — maybe they should, but leave us columnists out. Circulation directors whose numbers drop year after year don't have their salaries docked. Why do some captains of distribution see fit to hit carriers with charges for missed or unacceptable delivery?

Complaint charges of $1 or $2 are common — and not just for a missed paper, either. Paper's wet? Charge it! Not where the subscriber wanted it? Charge it! Delivered to a stopped subscriber? Charge it!

If carriers aren't providing good service, work with them to improve it. If you can't, find a new carrier. The rationale — that charges defray the costs of redelivery — doesn't hold water. The most blatant example of the one-sided relationship carriers face is the fact that when the newspaper fails to supply copies on time or saddles carriers with low-quality starts, carriers have no recourse. Forget a delivery? Pay up!

As for suggestions newspapers can't afford to do better for carriers, I suggest a glance elsewhere in this magazine, where newspaper stock prices are shown running 40% or so higher than last year.

Conference

which also include three certificates for discounted renewals, are sent only on receipt of payment for two weeks' delivery.

"A majority of the paper's telemarketing starts were ending up as nonpay stops," said Brotherton. "In addition, the circulation department was buying many of these subscribers over and over at great cost. This should help curb those who say 'yes' to a telemarketer but actually only want the premium and never intend to pay."

She speculated that the system should increase retention by helping new subscribers ease into paying the full price for the paper.

Concerned about the number of small retailers going out of business, Jim Brock, publisher of the Selma Enterprise, shared a simple technique to increase advertising: "I told the sales staff I wanted at least $1,200 a week in additional revenue from nontraditional advertisers." The result, he reported, was $70,000 to $80,000 a year in added revenue.

Shop Talk

distributing the cards to department managers. Editor Tom King said, "In editorial, they are given to me or the managing editor. We look into the issue the person raises, get an answer and then call that person back as quickly as possible. We then return [to the administrative assistant] the card with a note about how we responded and what action was taken. She logs our responses with appropriate dates."

Modern technology makes it relatively simple to stay on top of reader concerns. But even something as low-tech as published and unpublished letters to the editor, provided they are cataloged, can be a rich source of data about what irks readers. Publishing the phone numbers and e-mail addresses of reporters on bylined stories or simply publicizing how to lodge complaints can encourage readers to air them. Above all, editors can demonstrate they believe complaints to be an opportunity rather than a nuisance by showing the will and wit to track and deal with them effectively.

Gannett Pays Libel Award

GANNETT CO. HAS paid a high school soccer player $829,000 rather than appeal the jury award in a libel case over phony quotes printed in a Tennessee twice-weekly.

A story last year in the News-Examiner of Gallatin included a fictitious quote of a real soccer coach making sexually explicit comments about the player.

In April, jurors awarded $800,000 in punitive and compensatory damages to Gallatin High School soccer player Garrett Dixon Jr. (E&P, May 2, pp. 8-10).

Gannett attorney Alan Johnson had vowed to appeal, buy Dixon's attorney Clint Kelly said Dixon received a check after the deadline ran out for filing an appeal. He said that before the trial, Dixon would gladly have settled for as little as $200,000 — but Gannett never offered "a dime."

Rufus Lassiter, Dixon's former coach and now the school's assistant principal, had already been paid $150,000 in compensatory damages.

MAI Buys Belden

MEDIA ADVISORS International, a broadcast research and consulting company, has bought the newspaper research firm Belden Associates.

Terms were not disclosed. The transaction was brokered by Bulkley Capital Co., whose president, Brad Bulkley, is also a principal of MAI. MAI and Belden are based in Dallas.

Belden's client list includes Knight Ridder, Tribune Co. and Newhouse newspapers.

Racing Form Sold

STEVEN CRIST, A former New York Times sportswriter, has agreed to buy the 104-year-old Daily Racing Form from Primedia in a deal valued at $40 million.

With annual revenues of about $52 million, the paper had been on the block for two years but inspired little interest at the $75 million asking price.

New York-based Primedia, which is most active with magazines, attempted to boost profits by firing half the staff and buying computers that track races.

Crist, son of film critic Judith Crist, has been trying to buy the paper for some time and was joined in the purchase by Alpine Capital Group's merchant-banking group.

ROOM TO WRITE

New Times is looking for experienced news and feature writers to staff its hard-hitting weekly papers in Phoenix, Denver, Miami, Dallas, Houston, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Ft. Lauderdale. We publish in-depth, well-crafted stories that explore the issues, events and personalities that make our communities tick. Our stories inform and entertain readers, provoke strong reactions and win national awards.

If you understand the difference between magazine-style reporting and the hurried fact-finding of daily papers, if your copy is as much a pleasure to read as it is well researched, we want to hear from you. There are immediate openings for news writers in Denver, Miami, Phoenix, Houston and Ft. Lauderdale.

New Times is committed to building a diverse workforce and acknowledges the needs of employees with young families. We offer competitive salaries and benefits...and all the space you need to put the news in perspective and tell a good story.

Send all applications
(no phone calls, please) to:
Christine Brennan
Executive Managing Editor
New Times, Inc.
P.O. Box 5970
Denver, CO 80217

Include a cover letter; a résumé; your best clips; and three well-developed, tightly focused story ideas from your town that you'd pursue if you had the time and the space.

SALT LAKE CITY, host of the 2002 Olympic Games, is a growing and diverse Rocky Mountain crossroads where people, issues and culture combine to make it a great news town.

The Deseret News has been bird-dogging, scrutinizing, and reporting the area's ups and downs for nearly 150 years. We intend to keep it up for at least that much longer.

If you're an experienced hard-working journalist, we'd like to include you among our talented and professional reporting staff -- that has taken up residence in a new state-of-the-art newsroom.

We offer competitive pay and excellent benefits. Applicants with at least four years' experience should send clips and résumé to Rick Hall, city editor, Deseret News, P.O. Box 1257, Salt Lake City, UT 84110. E-mail: rick@desnews.com No phone calls.

SO YOU WANT to write it all? The Coshocton Tribune is looking for you, a reporter who wants to write hard news, but needs to turn a feature too, while working on an investigation as well. We want to see your name in the paper as much as you do. Don't worry about your experience level. You can be a newcomer or a seasoned veteran as long as you love journalism and want to succeed with plenty of opportunities to do so. Send examples of your work to John Raytis, 34 S. 4th Street, Zanesville, OH 43701.

Complaint Department Out To Lunch, Sorry

NEWSPAPERS ARE IN the business of collecting information. Ironically, editors seem to have difficulty doing it in their own newsrooms.

When asked in a survey — conducted by e-mail and telephone — by the Ethics and Values Committee of the American Society of Newspaper Editors whether their news organizations have a way to track the volume and subjects of complaints about news coverage, a stunning 86% of editors said they did not.

The survey, under the auspices of the University of Iowa's School of Journalism and Mass Communication, was given to a computer-generated representative cross-section of 150 daily newspapers with circulations of 25,000 or more. Completed questionnaires were obtained from 113 of the 150 editors surveyed, a response rate of better than 75%. The purpose was to analyze how well news organizations track complaints and to examine attitudes toward ombudsmen as a way to manage them.

Editors were asked to estimate the number of complaints about news coverage received by their newsrooms in the course of a week. Many of their responses were prefaced with "hard to say," "no way of knowing," "have no idea," "impossible to know." The vastly different numbers reported by editors at papers of similar size confirm a large degree of guesswork:

The Lancaster, Pa., Intelligencer Journal (43,000) reported one or two complaints a week while the Washington, Pa., Observer-Reporter (37,000) reported 40-50. The Warren, Ohio, Tribune Chronicle (39,000) reported three or four, and the Albany (Ga.) Herald (32,000) 20-40. The 178,000-circulation Austin (Texas) American-Statesman listed 20 to 25 complaints a week, the same as the 30,000 Albuquerque (N.M.) Tribune.

Not surprisingly, only about half the editors who responded expressed confidence "that all complaints about news coverage are brought to the attention of an editor." When asked, "Are you satisfied with the way complaints about news coverage are handled in the newsroom?" half the editors responded in the negative.

Why is customer service unheard of in the newsroom, but commonplace in circulation?

Does it matter? The best-run businesses believe it does. "Smart companies recognize the value of complaints," said James A. Unruh, chairman and CEO of Unisys, in his 1996 book Customers Mean Business (Addison-Wesley). "Complaints themselves are an excellent performance measure." Professors of business administration stress that compiling and coping with complaints are among the simplest, least expensive and most effective ways to uncover systemic problems and to improve performance.

Fewer than 40 U.S. newspapers have ombudsmen. The main advantage of the position, first established in Louisville in 1967, is that readers with complaints have a readily identifiable and disinterested person to contact. Given the glacial acceptance of the ombudsman concept in newsrooms over the past three decades, however, it is unrealistic to expect significant numbers of editors to embrace it. Indeed, despite acknowledged shortcomings in dealing with complaints, we found editors showed scant interest in hiring ombudsmen.

Are editors cool to the idea because of a lack of understanding? On the contrary. We conducted three distinct surveys — of editors at papers without ombudsmen, of editors at papers with them and of ombudsmen themselves. When we asked each of the three groups to list the most important duty of ombudsmen and the major advantages and disadvantages to the position, we found virtually no difference in the responses.

In a nutshell, editors at papers that do not have ombudsmen comprehend very well what they are missing, and simply are not interested, for two principal reasons: cost (editors would rather spend the money on another reporter or editor), and concern that an ombudsman would shield them and staffers from dealing directly with readers.

If ombudsmen are unlikely solutions, are there other ways for editors to turn complaints into a plus? When questioned about how they track complaints, several editors lamented ruefully that their newsrooms had no system — their circulation departments did. It's fairly common, in fact, for circulation customer-service departments to utilize computer software programs to log and tally gripes from ticked-off readers, whether they be about late or missed delivery, wet papers or editorial content.

A few editors described similar computer-based systems they use to track complaints about news coverage. At the 42,000-circulation New London, Conn., Day, for instance, the newsroom maintains a complaint file where all complaints are required to be logged on to its computer system. Managing editor Lance Johnson said his good reporters refer to the file often, and its contents are often mentioned at editorial meetings.

The 37,000-circulation Redding, Calif., Record Searchlight utilizes cards for employees in every department to record complaints and comments. The cards are deposited with an administrative assistant, who uses a Microsoft Works program to log them in before

(See Shop Talk on page 32)

Cranberg, a former Des Moines Register editorial page editor, and Starck, of the University of Iowa's journalism faculty, directed the survey reported in this article. Cranberg is on ASNE's Ethics and Values Committee. Starck is ombudsman for the Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Gazette.

You Can't Buy Betty Crocker

(But I'll gladly send you my weekly advice column for free.)

Betty Crocker

When my newspaper column first appeared almost two years ago, a lot of editors were skeptical. Oh, no one doubted the quality of my cooking and baking advice. After all, Betty Crocker is the most trusted name in America's kitchens.

Maybe they thought I would use the column for promotional purposes. But you can't buy my column and believe me, we're not selling. Anything.

Apparently your colleagues agree. "It's relevant," says one editor. "It's contemporary," says another. "She speaks to the concerns of today's readers." Which is why "Ask Betty" now appears in nearly 1,200 newspapers around the nation . . . with total monthly readership of more than two and a half billion.

A thousand of your colleagues now dish up America's hottest, freshest cooking and baking advice every week. So go ahead, dig in.

Ask Betty* is offered free of charge to newspapers that request and agree to carry it. We recognize your commitment to provide accurate, non-commercial promotion-free information to your readers, and never use the column to promote Betty Crocker products.

Crain News Service

WEEKLY COLUMNS

THE AUTOMOTIVE REPORT: A package of at least 12 stories plus DriveTime shorts direct from the industry leaders: Automotive News and AutoWeek. Rebate charts also available. Ideal for your automotive, classified and display sections.

WHEELS 101: A weekly Q and A on the basics of buying, leasing, driving and maintaining new and used cars, SUVs and light trucks.

DR. JOB: Q and A column and features for people hoping to seek and keep jobs or find a new career. Written by business journalist Sandra Pesmen.

THE HOME FRONT: Liven your real estate sections with this residential real estate column by columnist and author Don DeBat.

THE FRANCHISE ADVISER: This advice column written by Ellen Shubart, franchise adviser, helps readers learn how to buy—and then run—a franchise successfully.

UP TO SPEED: Motorsports. Weekly commentary on the races, racing scene and gearheads—the drivers, mechanics, owners and fans—who contribute to the growing popularity of motorsports.

JAMES BRADY'S WORLD: Wry humor and straight talk from this noted author, national columnist and broadcast personality.

INVESTMENT NEWS WEEKLY REPORT: A package of usable news from the weekly newspaper for financial advisers.

ADVERTISING AGE'S DAILY WORLD WIRE: This daily wire service, previously sold only to major global corporations, is now available to business editors. Released at 5 p.m. EST each business day, it contains 20 to 25 stories and items on marketing and advertising generated by the "bible" of advertising news. Can easily be edited into a daily or weekly marketing column.

SPECIAL PACKAGES

1999 NEW CAR AND TRUCKS: A look at the year's new automotive offerings that includes major makes and models with enough photos and materials to fill an annual New Models special section. Available in early October.

1999 AUTOWEEK'S BUYERS GUIDE: A Strategic Buying Guide including makes and models, availability, prices and the likelihood of wheeling and dealing. Also test drives and specifications.

CAREERS/EDUCATION: This special package of career and education features with Q and A columns fills jobs, education, graduation, recruitment and classified special sections. Available four times a year.

1999 AUTOWEEK'S OFFICIAL RACING FAN GUIDE: Available for your special sections are comprehensive entry lists, driver profiles and racing schedules for the major series of stock car, Indy car, champ car, sports car, and even truck racing.

Yes! I want to build my circulation and advertising base with the editorial resources of Crain News Service. Send me more information and samples of the above products.

DEAR EDITOR:

"Boldness, more boldness, and always boldness!"

French revolutionary Georges-Jacques Danton wasn't thinking about newspaper syndicates when he proclaimed these words to his countrymen more than 200 years ago, but his words express succinctly the philosophy that has set Universal Press Syndicate apart for the past 28 years.

Since our founding in 1970, Universal has distinguished itself by its willingness to be bold and take risks – risks on new talent, on content that pushes the envelope and makes readers think, on unique and offbeat humor that finds new ways to bring a smile to readers' faces.

We've also taken risks by being willing to think beyond the traditional boundaries of our business so we can help newspapers develop creative new ways to draw readers.

This risk-taking is a trait we're proud of, and it helps us help you offer readers the best possible product.

Boldness: Universal has demonstrated time and time again that we're the syndicate that's willing to take a chance on and nurture fresh, new cartoonists and writers. Our current lineup of young, up-and-coming talents is stellar and attracting plenty of notice: Bill Amend's FoxTrot celebrates its 10th anniversary this year and already has become one of America's favorite comic strips. Ted Rall, whose provocative cartoons and columns bring the voice of Generation X to today's newspapers, recently received the Deadline Club Award in the Best Editorial Cartoonist Category from the Society of Professional Journalists. Ruben Bolling's Tom the Dancing Bug and Dan Piraro's Bizarro continue to develop loyal followings among readers of both alternative and mainstream newspapers. These features and others you will read about in these pages are helping draw younger, less traditional readers to newspapers.

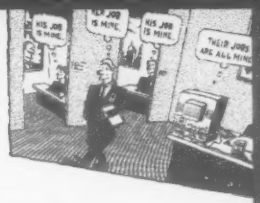
At the same time, Universal is home to some of the most respected, established creators in newspapers today. These writers, thinkers and cartoonists, some household names, are giants in the newspaper industry. Their work, too, has received many accolades. Just this year, the work of columnist Richard Reeves was honored with the National Society of Newspaper Columnists' Lifetime Achievement Award; the editorial cartoons of Pat Oliphant were the focus of an exhibition by the Library of Congress; and the 20th birthday of cartoonist Jim Davis' feline friend, Garfield, has been the focus of much media coverage. Next year marks the 30th anniversary for Betty Debnam's The Mini Page, still the acknowledged champion of children's features.

More boldness: Our Universal New Media division continues to develop new online attractions that draw readers to newspaper Web sites – and keep them coming back. From today's most popular comics, to puzzles and features available only online, to background information on our creators that enhances readers' interest in our features, the content developed by Universal New Media is always changing and evolving to help newspapers maintain reader loyalty in this competitive media age. And the synergy among Universal New Media, Andrews McMeel Publishing, Universal Licensing, our Product Development Group and the syndicate adds especial value to our features.

Always boldness: This spring, Universal opened its first international office, demonstrating the depth of our commitment to sharing our comics and features with readers from Buenos Aires to Bangkok to Budapest. We are excited by this new venture, which offers a world of new opportunities for our business and our creators. It won't be easy, and we still have much to learn. But if we cared only about what was easy, we wouldn't be Universal Press Syndicate.

We don't fancy ourselves revolutionaries, but we are committed to maintaining that boldness of vision that has distinguished our syndicate for so many years. We invite you to be bold with us, so we can keep giving readers reasons to take advantage of the wealth of information and entertainment that newspapers have to offer.

John P. McMeel
President
Universal Press Syndicate



Universal has distinguished itself by its willingness to take risks

...on new talent

...on content that makes readers think

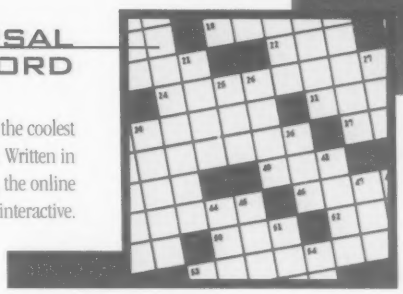
...on unique and offbeat humor

...on thinking beyond the traditional boundaries of our business.

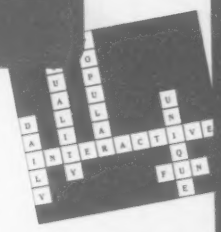
Ted Rall

Provocative, irreverent, outrageous and bitingly funny, Ted Rall brings the voice of Generation X to the pages of our country's newspapers.

The Universal Crossword



The Universal Crossword online is one of the coolest interactive game applications for the Web. Written in the exciting Java programming language, the online puzzle is completely interactive.

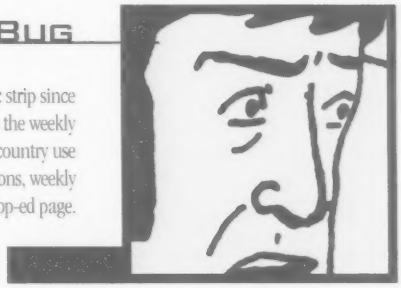


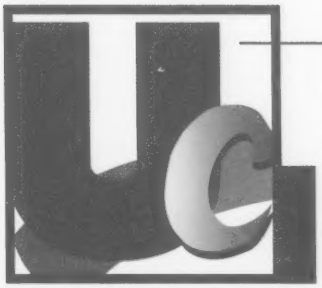
Column of the Americas

Column of the Americas, by Patrisia Gonzales and Roberto Rodriguez, adds a much-needed Latino perspective to newspaper editorial pages.

Tom the Dancing Bug

Dubbed by one writer "the funniest, sharpest comic strip since the heyday of Life in Hell," Tom the Dancing Bug is the weekly epitome of irreverence. Newspapers throughout the country use Tom the Dancing Bug in entertainment sections, weekly sections – even on the op-ed page.



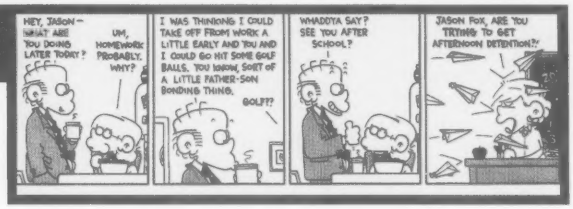


UClick

When it comes to Web-based media, UClick delivers. This service provides online newspapers with electronic comics and columns in a Web format that looks great, loads fast and functions reliably. In other words, UClick delivery service makes it easier for you to provide compelling online content for your subscribers.

FoxTrot

In more than 800 newspapers, millions of people are taking a hilarious look at modern family life through Bill Amend's eyes. FoxTrot is a comic strip with attitude, wit and a big dose of reality. Amend's brilliant understanding of sibling rivalry and generational struggles comes to life in a refreshing blend of humor and truth.



Adam@Home

Sometimes we all need help seeing the humor in everyday family life, and since 1984, cartoonist Brian Basset has helped us discover it each day. In fact, a lot of families have grown up with this comic strip as their roles have evolved along with those of Adam, Laura, Clayton, Katy and Baby Nick. As a testament to Basset's skill at revealing the amusement of family life, the strip's popularity continues to grow.

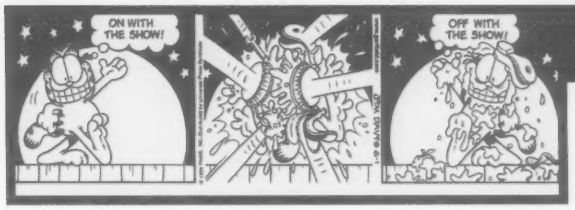
Crankshaft

Whether he's feuding with the neighbors or practicing his own brand of bus route safety, Ed Crankshaft's cantankerous capers both amuse and touch his many fans. There's a big heart behind that surly disguise, and Tom Batiuk and Chuck Ayers bring the real character of America's favorite senior into millions of households that can truly relate to this mix of hilarity and timely issues.

We're a talent agency, a special kind of talent agency, because the creators and authors we represent and promote are special kinds of people.

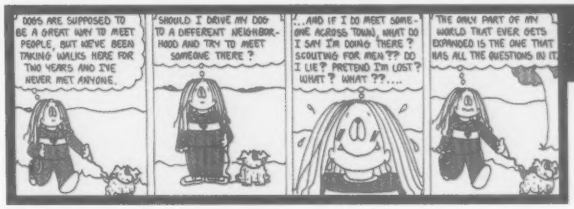
GARFIELD

What a cat! With a worldwide client list of more than 2,500 newspapers, Jim Davis lures us into Garfield's world with cynicism and a taste for lasagna that can't be fulfilled. His crafty talent with words and sneaky preference for practical jokes often leave his owner, Jon – and us – speechless. And always wanting more.



CATHY

Young, single career women around the world identify with Cathy. Parent management. Social disasters. Personal struggles. The reasons for Cathy's popularity may be simple, but over the years, Cathy Guisewite's stories of persevering charm and wit are far more sophisticated. We understand her motives all too well, and that makes it even easier to keep on laughing with her.



BLISS

An ability to connect with young adults – as well as those of us with a few more years on us – has created a loyal following for Stephen Hersh's Bliss, a daily examination of young marriage. Steven and Dana's sweet-and-sour relationship rings true, and it helps us remember that we've been there, too!

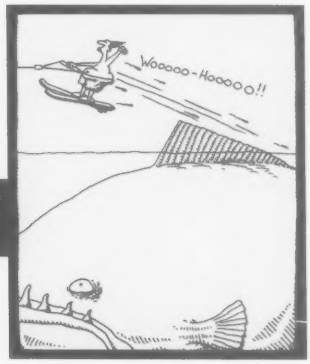
Close to Home

The offbeat characters of Close to Home, when planted in everyday places and situations, never fail to supply millions of readers with a daily dose of the unexpected. Cartoonist John McPherson's clever gallery of oddballs and misfits punches up more than 500 newspapers with their hilarious circumstances and extraordinary events.

Tank McNamara

Who's the biggest "Sports Jerk of the Year"? According to Tank McNamara's loyal fans, Latrell Sprewell deserved last year's honors. They voted by the thousands in Tank's annual contest. Jeff Millar and Bill Hinds have a knack for finding the absurdity in big-time athletics and using it to turn sports fans into devoted readers.

In the Bleachers



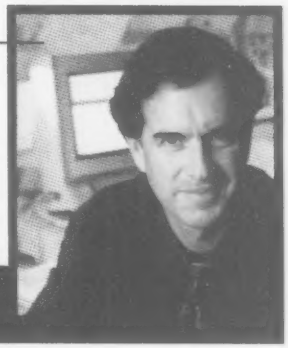
Even the most serious sports fans can see the humor and irony in today's athletics. Steve Moore helps us laugh at ourselves and those in the professional spotlight by drawing attention to the comedy of sports. His panel appeals to both couch spuds and sporting studs with its sharp wit and distinctive art.

Universal Press Syndicate takes its funnies seriously. It has, for almost 30 years, demonstrated a singular commitment to breakthrough comic strips.

BIZARRO

Readers who prefer their humor a bit twisted, with a minimum of cute and a heavy sprinkle of subversion, love Bizarro. Dan Piraro's panel that is currently featured in almost 300 newspapers. With characters ranging from Chihuahuas to singing Buddhist monks to Catzilla, the terrifying napping cat, Bizarro's offbeat humor makes it, in the words of one newspaper writer, "a comic for readers who don't read comics."

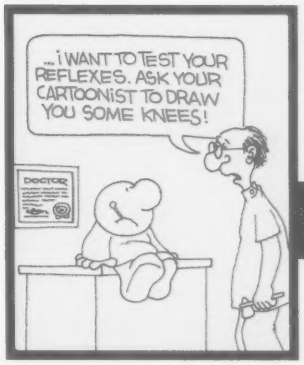
DOONESBURY



Garry Trudeau not only creates the most biting commentary in the funny pages, but his work often becomes a headline in and of itself. More than 1,400 newspapers carry this time-tested strip, which casts a watchful eye on the people, trends and issues facing Americans – from the Capitol steps to California's political hotbed.

ZIGGY

We all feel for Ziggy. Actually we sometimes feel just like him – always a step behind or a nickel short. But one thing's for sure: Tom Wilson and Tom Wilson Jr. have never let this amazingly popular panel fall behind. Ziggy's loyal readers follow his exploits in more than 600 newspapers around the world.



Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren gives readers a lot of things, but primarily she provides opportunity. Opportunity for valuable insight. Opportunity to connect with more readers than any other columnist. She once described herself as having "good old-fashioned horse sense, the product of a stable mind." Her brand of humor adds flavor to her engaging style of wisdom – just another way she helps readers gain new understanding of themselves and their world.

WorkWise

Office politics. Advancement. Outgrowing your job. These are common trials and challenges in the workplace for many Americans. Dr. Mildred Culp, a workplace consultant who has advised more than 4,000 clients, helps readers achieve maximum effectiveness at work with practical tips on everything from retooling your skills to spotting fertile ground for promotions.

Focus on the Family

In today's complex world of family issues, there's no better time for Dr. James Dobson to put to work for your readers his lifetime of practical experience in dealing with family problems. His Focus on the Family column gives weekly advice on parenting, marriage and relationships from a conservative Christian perspective. Dobson's commonsense solutions to difficult problems are eagerly sought out by his readers in more than 600 newspapers.

Roger Ebert

Whether it's picking a flick for the family or adding a movie column to your paper, why not get the best? Roger Ebert, the only film critic ever to win a Pulitzer Prize, helps millions keep up with Hollywood's latest productions. Through his careful examinations of today's films and his superb literary talent, Ebert not only informs readers, but delights them.

At Home With Mary Engelbreit

Spending time with Mary Engelbreit means learning about and from one of the most talented and beloved artists of our time. At Home With Mary Engelbreit gives us all a chance to get to know her in this innovative column that blends her endearing artwork with useful ideas and the guidance to make them come alive.

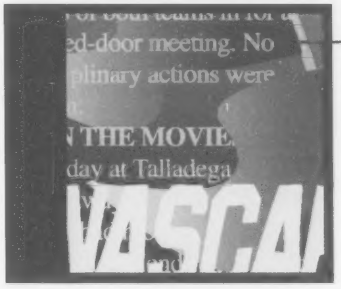
The comic strips and commentators of Universal Press Syndicate remind us of who we are, and show us who we can be.

The Motley Fool

Nobody ever said investment advice had to be boring. The Motley Fool is hands-down the hottest, most irreverent personal investment column available. Written by brothers Tom and David Gardner, who also offer an interactive Motley Fool for your online paper, the column is named for the Shakespearean jesters who spoke the truth and scorned pretense. It's smart, entertaining and straight-talking. No fooling.

The Last Word in Astrology

Interactive services from The Last Word in Astrology by Eugenia Last give devoted readers additional guidance from the stars and new incentives to keep returning to her printed column. Last's Web site and call-in telephone number support her column's "day ratings" and birthday readings, while providing reader services that build loyalty well beyond that of typical astrology features.



NASCAR This Week

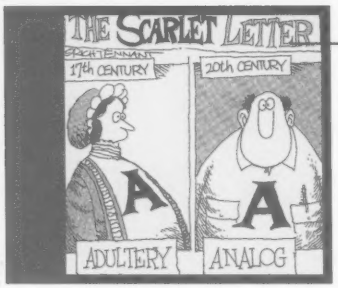
Give your local NASCAR fans a chance to follow their favorite drivers, while giving yourself the opportunity to win readers and advertising! NASCAR This Week takes America's fastest-growing (but most underreported) sport from the speedway to your newspaper. This full-size broadsheet features highlights, stats, raceway gossip, driver profiles and reader letters.

7-Day Menu Planner

It's a serious quandary: News reports keep telling us of new ways to use nutrition for health, but today's busy lifestyle leaves most families with little time for meal planning. Nutrition consultant and TV personality Susan Nicholson has all the answers in her 7-Day Menu Planner, a practical guide for meal plans and recipes with emphasis on nutrition, taste, ease of preparation and budget. (She even has ideas for the leftovers!)

News of the Weird

From a humble beginning as a hobby among friends to one of the most popular and wildly entertaining newspaper features, Chuck Shepherd's News of the Weird is a peculiar story in itself. Each week, relying on his five-newspapers-a-day habit and a worldwide network of hundreds of correspondents, Shepherd puts together a compendium of strange-but-true recent events as reported in the legitimate press.

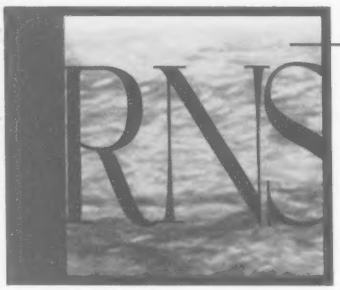


The 5th Wave

As the nation's best-known computer cartoonist, Rich Tennant was one of the first to find megabytes of humor in the often frustrating human interaction with personal computers. Dubbed "the Gary Larson of high-tech," Tennant makes a personal connection with readers of newspapers, computer magazines, corporate publications and the popular ...For Dummies series of computer books.

America's Line

Our money's on America's Line to go all the way. America's Line, a sports odds column by Las Vegas' own Michael "Roxy" Roxborough, gives readers up-to-the-minute information seven days a week, with special editions for the Super Bowl, NBA finals, World Series and the NCAA Final Four. Roxy's column is a sure bet for fans of any sports worth wagering on.



Religion News Service

With exceptional insight and solid reporting skills, the staff of Religion News Service, led by editor David Anderson, covers religion as it should be covered – as news. The service gives readers a grasp of worldwide issues of local import through a mix of stories, features and graphics.

Third Age News Service

Attract and keep a growing generation of loyal readers – today's seniors, who are more energetic and involved than any older generation before them. This vibrant weekly package of editorial content, photos and graphics fits a busy lifestyle with relevant news, entertainment and advice on topics ranging from personal finance to legal affairs to travel. Don't overlook this flourishing readership!

Primary Color

Unparalleled color photography and outstanding journalism are the cornerstones of the lifestyle feature Primary Color. Travel and Home each feature four monthly articles with accompanying photographs. Primary Color Food is a weekly service incorporating Cole's Cooking A to Z. And After a Fashion is Patricia McLaughlin's weekly discussion of trends on and off the runways.

Generations of children have been introduced to the wealth of information in newspapers since The Mini Page's debut nearly three decades ago.

The Mini Page

A vital component of our industry's effort to reach young readers, The Mini Page is an award-winning supplement of information and fun activities for kids. With a background as a teacher and journalist, The Mini Page editor and creator Betty Debnam possesses a practical understanding of what kids find interesting.

Sports Illustrated for Kids

One of the most popular magazines for children now offers a syndicated feature for young people ages 8 to 14. Sports Illustrated for Kids highlights the sports kids play and the athletes they love to watch. Colorful photos, puzzles, games and more are all tailored to a kid's taste.

You Can With Beakman & Jax

Help kids make science real! You Can With Beakman & Jax gives kids innovative and instructive experiments that answer their questions about the science of daily life. Creator Jok Church focuses on the "whys" and the "hows" to bring the significance of physics, chemistry and astronomy to young minds. This weekly feature was the inspiration for the renowned "Beakman's World" on CBS-TV.

Tell Me a Story

For most of us, the memory of a story told before bedtime is like a warm glass of milk – soothing, comforting, savored. Amy Friedman and Jillian Gilliland give us a children's classic or original story every week, accompanied by a captivating illustration that can launch the imagination. Researchers tell us that reading to kids makes them good readers; Tell Me a Story is a natural place to introduce good habits.

WWW.4Kids.org

WWW.4Kids.org is a weekly feature that truly reaches young readers and beyond, serving as a valuable guide for parents, teachers and librarians as well. It covers kid-friendly Internet sites and opens great opportunities for children to explore the world without leaving home. Created by educators at the University of Kansas, WWW.4Kids.org uncovers fun, educational sites that encourage safe surfing.

WILLIAM F. BUCKLEY JR.

Columnist, author, novelist and TV host William F. Buckley Jr. has done it all – and written about most of it. His views have helped presidents shape policy, and his distinctive style and wit infuse all of his writing. An unwavering conservative, Buckley isn't bashful about taking unusual or unpopular stands.

JULES FEIFFER

Winner of an Oscar, a Tony and a Pulitzer Prize, Jules Feiffer is an exceptional talent and entertainer in contemporary American culture. His signature talking heads bring wisdom and self-awareness to an unwavering readership that has enjoyed this artist's version of perfect pitch every week for years.

MAGGIE GALLAGHER

Provoke interest and discussions among readers in your community with the help of Maggie Gallagher, whose column offers baby boomers a fresh, conservative voice. She tackles hot topics ranging from same-gender marriage and abortion rights to ebonics and cloning. Her powerful writing is bringing a fresh personality back to opinion pages across the country.

GEORGIE ANNE GEYER

Award-winning foreign correspondent Georgie Anne Geyer has interviewed countless world leaders, diplomats, guerrillas and poets. Geyer's ability to predict political events and social changes with remarkable accuracy fascinates readers, while her tenacious pursuit of the facts and insightful analyses have built a loyal following.

Universal's roster of artists features an unprecedented number of Pulitzer Prize winners, including columnists Mary McGrory, David Shribman and Garry Wills, comic strip artist Garry Trudeau, and political cartoonists Pat Oliphant, Tony Auth, Ben Sargent, Jules Feiffer and Tom Toles.

JAMES J. KILPATRICK

There are two beats James J. Kilpatrick covers better than anyone: the Supreme Court and the art of writing. In Covering the Courts, he combines his love of the law with a perspective that comes from years of following "The Supremes." In The Writer's Art, his witty passion for language finds expression in day-to-day examples we all face.

JOHN LEO

Some conservative columnists never attempt to bridge the gap between Washington policies and the true ethical and social issues that affect our communities. John Leo has been fulfilling that need for more than 20 years. His column takes a serious look at the society we've built and presents issues in ways that help us better understand social problems and see their solutions.

MARY MCGRORY

Mary McGrory is one of the few members of the Washington press corps who is as good a writer as she is a reporter. In her twice-weekly column for The Washington Post, she chronicles the goings-on in Washington with wit, style and insight. And her continual desire to search for the story beyond the headlines makes her a pleasure to read.

PAT OLIPHANT

No one is safe from the acid brush of Pat Oliphant, acknowledged by many as the nation's most influential political cartoonist. A master of what he calls "confrontational art," Oliphant spares neither liberal nor conservative, sinner nor saint. As the most widely syndicated political cartoonist in the world and a winner of the Pulitzer Prize, Oliphant produces work that is as visually stunning as it is metaphorically powerful.

Richard Reeves

Presidential biographer Richard Reeves has a solid grounding in American history, allowing him to report today's events from a standpoint shaped by the events of the past. Reeves is a shrewd and conversational observer of the power players in contemporary American life. This year, Reeves received the National Society of Newspaper Columnists' Lifetime Achievement Award.

David Shribman

Pulitzer Prize-winner David Shribman, Washington bureau chief for The Boston Globe, is known for his astute assessment of national politics as well as the political scene throughout the country. His outside-the-Beltway reporting takes him to cities and towns around the U.S., where he has the enviable ability to assess political temperament.

Tom Toles

With his singular art style, Tom Toles tackles the complex issues of the day. This Pulitzer Prize-winning cartoonist skillfully targets political, economic and social concerns – in particular complicated environmental issues – with a clear-eyed precision that hits the mark every time.

Cynthia Tucker

As the editorial page editor at the Atlanta Constitution and a frequent commentator on political talk shows, Cynthia Tucker is known as a compassionate and critical observer of today's political and social scene. Her experience as a reporter, columnist and editorial writer has given Tucker an uncommon ability to take an informed, cogent look at the issues.

Garry Wills

Named by Newsweek magazine as one of the 50 most influential Americans, Garry Wills is also one of America's most distinguished scholars. He's won countless awards for his books, teachings and cultural commentary. Wills' wide-ranging brilliance graces op-ed pages for the pleasure and enlightenment of millions.

COMMENTARY

Nick Anderson Donna Britt
Richard Cohen Richard Estrada
Ellen Goodman Jim Hoagland

David Broder

E. J. Dionne Jr.

Nick Anderson Anderson satirizes politics and human foibles with images from contemporary culture, appealing to readers across the spectrum. He is one of the new generation of cartoonists who is hip to what's hot. Chief editorial cartoonist of the Louisville Courier-Journal. Three to four cartoons a week.

Donna Britt Whether writing on race, language, behavior or popular culture, Britt displays a spirituality seldom seen in mainstream media. Her personal approach and traditional values make her immensely popular with readers young and old. Once a week.

David Broder A great journalist who holds politicians and public servants accountable for their deeds. Spots trends so early that his non-ideological commentary is must-reading for students of American politics everywhere. Pulitzer winner. Twice weekly.

Richard Cohen A witty critic of pretense, be it in politics or everyday life, Cohen takes on all sacred cows. He leans left on many issues, but sometimes surprises readers by veering the other way. Twice weekly.

E. J. Dionne Jr. A gifted journalist who makes sense out of political and social issues, always with a tone of civility that readers find engaging. A modern progressive who seeks and finds common ground on even the thorniest of issues. Twice weekly.

Richard Estrada Estrada explains the profound changes brought by the recent wave of immigration. A student of Latin American history, he believes newcomers must learn English and have marketable skills to become good American citizens. Associate editor of the editorial page of The Dallas Morning News. Once a week.

Ellen Goodman A pioneer in bringing family issues to editorial pages, Goodman is without peer in explaining social changes that affect us all. She has a huge readership because her topics are those people care about. Associate editor of The Boston Globe. Pulitzer winner. Twice weekly.

Jim Hoagland A two-time Pulitzer winner—for foreign reporting and commentary—Hoagland analyzes complex international issues in a way that everyone can understand. As a reporter, editor and columnist for The Washington Post he has built contacts around the world. Twice weekly.

COMMENTARY

Michael Kelly An engaging writer and dogged reporter with a sense of outrage over wrongdoing wherever it appears. Conservative leaning, but always willing to give credit where it's due, Kelly is a bright new star in syndication. Once a week.

Charles Krauthammer An elegant wordsmith whose original insights offer a new take on current events. Krauthammer is a conservative thinker who measures public figures against traditional values. His foreign affairs columns offer clear-eyed recommendations for governments to follow. Pulitzer winner. Once a week.

Geneva Overholser One of the best-known journalists in America. Her experience as editor of the Des Moines Register and then ombudsman of The Washington Post gives her unique insights into the concerns readers want addressed. A truly distinctive voice who often surprises and always informs. Twice weekly.

Neal Peirce American cities are his beat. The solutions to most of America's problems are found at the local level, and Peirce is on the scene to spread the news. He's at the forefront of reporting on cities that are changing to cope with the global economy. Once a week.

BUSINESS & FINANCE

Kenneth R. Harney Jane Bryant Quinn Brit Hume and T. R. Reid

The Nation's Housing by Kenneth R. Harney A true friend of the consumer, Harney helps homeowners, sellers and buyers get the best deal in the biggest investment of their lives. With two-thirds of Americans owning their homes, no newspaper should be without Harney's real-estate advice. Once a week.

Jane Bryant Quinn Simply the best at helping consumers get the most for their money and protect their financial holdings. In her direct, conversational style, Quinn makes even the most arcane subjects easy to understand. The most widely syndicated consumer advice columnist today. Twice weekly.

Computer Report by T.R. Reid and Brit Hume Two outstanding journalists cover the computer industry with a keen eye toward new developments in software. Their hands-on experience helps readers avoid software bugs and pitfalls. Reid, a Washington Post reporter in London, and Hume, chief Washington correspondent and managing editor of Fox News, write on alternate weeks. Once a week.

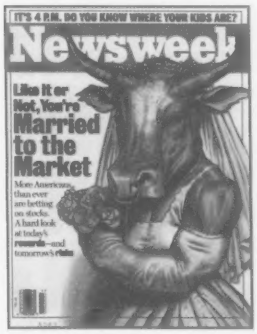
Newsweek NEWS SERVICE

From Washington, D.C., to Hong Kong, from Wall Street to Main Street, from the field of sport to the field of medicine, from the most critical policy decisions to the most critically acclaimed films, Newsweek offers timely reporting, sparkling writing and incisive analysis. This first-rate journalism—cover articles, interviews, exposés, commentary and features—is available each week to publications worldwide through the Newsweek News Service.

The Newsweek News Service provides 20-35 stories and columns a week, including cover articles from Newsweek's four English-language editions.

Any newspaper or magazine wishing to strengthen its feature lineup and its coverage of world affairs will find Newsweek indispensable. People sections will be strengthened by fascinating interviews with, and profiles of, personalities in and out of the public eye.



North America

Pacific

World News Newsweek correspondents stationed in 24 world capitals contribute stories that can touch people's lives no matter where they live. Count on Newsweek journalists to provide analysis and offer perspective on the top news of the week.

Lifestyle, Arts, Science, Technology, Sports Newsweek covers a wide array of feature material with some of the best, most widely recognized writers in the business. Newsweek always has the answer to the question, "What does this mean to me?"

U.S. Political and National Affairs Newsweek's "dream team" of political writers covers the Washington scene with a level of privileged access, award-winning writing, passion and influence that no other magazine can match.

Focus On Regular feature packages such as Focus on Technology (appearing bi-weekly), Focus on Your Money and Focus on Your Health (both monthly) offer concentrated, authoritative, timely coverage of subjects of special interest.

Interviews Look for Newsweek International's exclusive interviews each week with people in the news, from authors, actors and sports figures to world leaders.

Commentary Count on Newsweek to provide provocative essays that can anchor an opinion or op-ed page. Newsweek contributors are featured, as well as notable guest essayists.

My Turn Columns "My Turn" columns enable readers—some famous, most of them everyday folks—to speak out on an amazing variety of topics and connect in extraordinary ways to other readers.

Special Weekly Features

Periscope – A collection of hot and timely tidbits often exclusive to Newsweek.

Cyberscope – A hip collection of cutting-edge techno-bites, weekly updates on software and Web sites.

The Millennium Notebook – A weekly peek into the future.

Newsmakers – If they are making news, they're in Newsmakers.

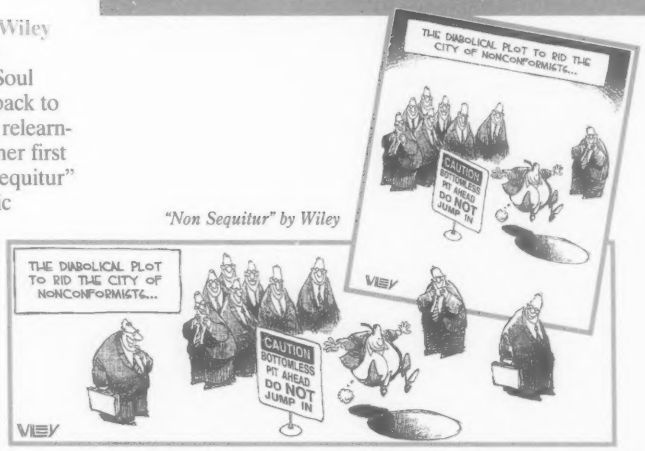
"PC and Pixel" by Thach Bui

COMICS

Homer by Wiley
Homer the Reluctant Soul keeps coming back to Earth learning and relearning life lessons. Homer first appeared in "Non Sequitur" and got such a titanic following that he has his own place on the Sunday comics page. "Homer" is the first Sunday strip offered exclusively in vertical format, which means it can be added without displacing another strip. Sunday only.



"Non Sequitur" by Wiley

Non Sequitur by Wiley
As a keen observer of the absurdities of life, Wiley's extraordinary artistic talent and biting wit make readers think and laugh about the world around them. The multi-award-winning daily is available in both strip and panel formats and the Sunday features Wiley's spectacular watercolor-like process. A hugely popular strip with fans all over the world. Daily and Sunday.

"Pickles" by Brian Crane

PC and Pixel by Thach Bui
PC Odata is a struggling consultant trying to make his way in the computer age. Downsized out of his job, PC free-lances on his home computer, but often is mystified by the ups and downs of cyberworld. His laptop-toting cat Pixel, her tekkie mouse friend Digit and 9-year-old Leo from next door have more computer savvy than he does. Daily and Sunday.

Pickles by Brian Crane
Earl and Opal Pickles share the delights and dilemmas of their golden years with their strong-willed daughter Sylvia, sweet 5-year-old grandson Nelson, plus a close circle of friends and dear pets. "Pickles," with its gentle, but dry, humor and genuine characters, tops one comics survey after another. Daily and Sunday.

"Cheap Thrills Cuisine"
by Bill Lombardo and Thach Bui

GENERAL FEATURES

Cheap Thrills Cuisine by Bill Lombardo and Thach Bui Lovable Chef Peppi whips up unique recipes in a comic strip for food pages. The recipes are the original creations of real-life chef Bill Lombardo and are crafted into comic strip art by cartoonist Thach Bui. In color and black and white. Once a week.

Tell Me About It by Carolyn Hax Having trouble in your first job? Your relationship? Tell Carolyn about it and you'll get good advice laced with attitude and biting wit. Hax's entertaining style appeals directly to readers in their teens and 20s. Once a week, with a weekly illustration by Nick Galifianakis.

The Family Filmgoer by Jane Horwitz With The Family Filmgoer as their guide, families everywhere will better enjoy watching movies together. Film and theater critic Jane Horwitz reviews three to four new releases each week, and offers a unique sidebar, "Beyond the Ratings Game," telling parents which current movies are suitable for their children. Once a week.

Carolyn Hax

Tom Shales

Bill Lombardo and Thach Bui

Jane Horwitz

Nick Galifianakis

Tom Shales With devastating wit and great style, Shales skewers the shoddy and the pompous in American television. His reviews are often more entertaining than the shows he covers, and he spots cultural trends long before anyone else. Pulitzer winner. Twice weekly, plus specials on major televised events.

Washington Post Book World Pulitzer winners Jonathan Yardley and Michael Dirda lead a parade of some of the best book reviewers in the business. With up to 20 reviews and features a week, Book World is an asset to any publication. Two transmissions a week—the Sunday tab and weekday reviews.

Washington Post Magazine Crossword Puzzle One of the most creative and challenging puzzles available—and not just for aficionados. The Post puzzle features clues from popular culture and current events. Created by some of the nation's top constructors. One puzzle a week.

PEANUTS
CHARLES M. SCHULZ
For almost 50 years, Schulz's endearing characters have entertained millions all over the world with daily philosophical musings and humorous stories.

FOR BETTER OR FOR WORSE
LYNN JOHNSTON
Johnston's true-to-life characters, superb artistry and emotional sensitivity have earned the Pattersons their place as the most beloved family in the comics.

DILBERT
SCOTT ADAMS
The undisputed cartoon hero of millions of office workers, Dilbert hilariously captures and skewers the underlying absurdities of life.

OVER THE HEDGE
MICHAEL FRY AND T LEWIS
Witty woodland creatures R.J. and Verne supply plenty of sassy mischief and rollicking humor "where suburban sprawl meets nature's call."

MARMADUKE
BRAD ANDERSON
The big, boisterous Great Dane.

JUMP START
ROBB ARMSTRONG
A tender, funny view of married life that rings true with readers of all colors hungry for authentic, positive representations of middle-class African-Americans.

NANCY
GUY AND BRAD GILCHRIST
A true classic. Nancy, Sluggo and Aunt Fritzi delight readers of all ages.

"When we say 'parents invited', we usually mean to sit and watch."

HERMAN
JIM UNGER
The big lug is back, personally updated by the original master of wry, offbeat humor.

ROSE IS ROSE
PAT BRADY
Beautifully drawn, Rose is Rose is an imaginative comic strip that captures moments of sheer fantasy, loving family reality and endearing innocence.

DRABBLE
KEVIN FAGAN
The silly antics of the Drabble family have made this comic strip a favorite of readers worldwide.

LUANN
GREG EVANS
A proven favorite with teens and parents, Luann is a funny, touching chronicle of teenage life.

NEW FAT CATS
CHARLIE PODREBARAC
A feisty feline farce starring Leo and Bobcat, two sly corporate kitties, and their Machiavellian Momcat.

NEW
TOP OF THE WORLD!
MARK TONRA
Hilarious cons and captors mix slapstick pranks with contemporary cunning in an exhilarating escape from the everyday.

NEW
MICHAEL CAVNA
An innovative, fun-filled blend of pop culture and history, Warped delivers intelligent laughs with every installment.

NEW
CHILDREN'S TELEVISION WORKSHOP
By popular demand, this fun, interactive feature is now available both daily and Sunday, with puzzles and activities that encourage kids to explore the newspaper.

CONTRIBUTING PUBLICATIONS

Established in 1962 by then publishers Otis Chandler of the Los Angeles Times and Philip L. Graham of The Washington Post, the Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service is one of the world's leading supplemental (as opposed to primary) wire services. LAT-WP's report of more than 100,000 words per day consists of breaking stories, columns, features, analysis, commentary, photos and graphics. It is produced by Times Mirror and Washington Post Co. journalists around the world, as well as guest contributors.

The service is delivered to hundreds of print, broadcast and non-media clients in 49 countries, via state-of-the-art delivery methods. Subject areas include international affairs, politics, public policy, economics and finance at all levels, technology, personalities, lifestyles, food, culture and entertainment, as well as sports. The goal is to tell not only the story of events and trends, in depth, but also the meaning behind them. (Primary news services often tell the story first and update it the most frequently; supplemental news services do the most complete job of telling the story.) Not included on the wire are news of local interest only, summary news briefs, and tabular material related to sports, television, investments and weather.

In the only systematic balloting ever conducted to determine supplemental news service preferences, LAT-WP was named "best supplemental wire service" in a survey of 5,000 journalists polled by the American Journalism Review publication.

LAT-WP's contributing newspapers are based in entertainment, political and financial capitals: the Los Angeles Times in Los Angeles, The Washington Post in Washington, D.C., and Newsday in New York. Multiple news bureaus are situated in many of the other major cities of the world, in a total 22 countries. Other publications of the two parent companies also contribute to the news service, led by The Baltimore Sun newspaper.

News service editors in Los Angeles and Washington evaluate dateline content from hundreds of reporters and photographers worldwide for inclusion in the LAT-WP report. Selected copy is edited three times: by a copy editor at the originating publication, by an assignment editor at the originating publication, and by at least one news service editor. Pieces are edited for the news service with respect to such elements as length, timeliness, understandable references and the addition of reader background information. Numerous news budgets and advisories are distributed throughout the day, alerting subscribing editors to highlights of LAT-WP content.

Although they are a small proportion of the total volume of Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service copy, regular columns are one of the most popular aspects of the wire. More than one hundred standing features move at set times during the week, canvassing subject matter from book publishing to the wine of the week. Name recognition is strong for many of the bylined columnists. The most-used columns are for editorial and opinion pages.

LAT-WP changes with the times: While it now distributes several computer columns, a few years ago there were none. The number of correspondents deployed in Hong Kong greatly increased before and after the Chinese takeover. The volume of sports copy increases in Olympic years.

More than a generation ago, Otis Chandler and Philip L. Graham embarked on the publication of world-class newspapers. Dozens of U.S. Pulitzer Prizes later, one by-product of their efforts is an esteemed supplemental news service.

ONE PUZZLE. ALL AGES.

tidbits™ By Susan Shelley — AIRLINE HAZARD

How to solve a tidbits puzzle

A tidbit is a part of a word. The tidbit in each section of the puzzle will be in all the answers in that section. The tidbit in the first section of this puzzle is "ob," so the first answer contains "ob" and is a "hotel area." The first letters of the correct answers, read down, will spell out an "airline hazard."
